DYNAMITE IN FULLER MAIL FOUND AT HUB POSTOFFICE

A package, containing a pound of dynamite and addressed to Governor Fuller, was detected in the United States mails by a postoffice clerk at the Burlington avenue parcel post station, Back Bay, it was revealed today. Attached to the package with a piece of wire was this letter, written in a foreign hand: "I have succeeded in getting 1-4 ton of this. If Sacco and Vanzetti going to be murder, I am going to get more and use it. (Signed) A Citizen of the World."

The bundle was mailed in Boston last Monday. A small army of postoffice inspectors, Department of Justice agents and secret service operatives are scouring Boston for the man who sent it.

The dynamite was discovered by Frank W. Steele, made up into an oblong parcel, having much the appearance of a shallow shoe box. It was wrapped in ordinary brown wrapping paper, and in outward appearance was no different from thousands of other bundles that pass through the Burlington street parcel post station each day.

But since the sentencing of Saco and Vanzetti to the electric chair the postoffice employes, from the postmaster down, have been on the alert to prevent the mails being used in an attempt on the life of Governor Fuller.

$350,000 TO WELLESLEY GIFT FROM JOHN D., JR.

Wellesley, May 14 (A.P.)—A new dormitory at Wellesley College, to be built on the site of Stone Hall which was partly destroyed by fire on March 7 last, has been made possible by a gift of $350,000 from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

One of the two units of the building will be known as Hazard Hall, in honor of Miss Caroline Hazard, president of the college from 1888 to 1910. Miss Hazard is now a resident of Peacedale, R. I.

The other unit will be named Olive Davis Hall in memory of the late Olive Davis, a graduate of Wellesley, who was director of the college halls of residence from 1900 to 1917.

A bequest to the college from Miss Davis, who died several years ago, will be applied toward the cost of the new dormitory. The amount of this bequest was not made public.

8 INJURED IN TROLLEY AND TRUCK COLLISION

Eight passengers on a Stoneham bound street car were injured and cut by flying glass today when the street car crushed into a five-ton truck on Mystic avenue, Somerville.

The injured:

Mary Fitzpatrick, 70, Russell street, Malden, cuts and bruises.

William F. Callahan, Gerry street, Stoneham, cut by flying glass.

Helen Quinlan, Main street, Stoneham, shock, cuts, bruises.

Herman Huebner, Lincoln street, Stoneham, ankle injured.

Ida Lovejoy, Spring street, Stoneham, minor cuts.

Josephine Stafford, East Boston, injury to back.

Mingolina Amanda, East Boston, injury to head.

Manett Hassan, Tremont street, injury to right leg.

The truck was turned around and tossed into the paint shop of John J. Grady, at No. 87 Mystic avenue. The car was derailed. Glass in every window was shattered.

Motorman Phillip Doherty was operating the car. He was behind the truck, operated by Oliver W. Lemrise of New Bedford. The truck started to turn into a plant at No. 105 Mystic avenue when the street car struck it. Neither operator was injured, although the vestibule of the street car was crushed.

WEATHER CONDITIONS, fog, cold and head winds prevailing over a wide stretch of the Atlantic make trans-Atlantic flight especially dangerous. But courage overlooks fog and wind, and it is likely that some one, or two or three determined American fliers may be on their way across the ocean within a day.

THE LATEST arrival on the Atlantic coast, Captain Charles E. Lindbergh, young six-foot-tall air mail pilot from St. Louis, is a flier for America to be proud of.

He broke two records coming from the Pacific coast to New York in two hops, making the trip in twenty-one hours, twenty minutes. He is the only man that ever flew that distance ALONE.

'FLYING FOOL' CRASHES ON EVE OF PARIS FLIGHT

Curtiss Field, N. Y., May 14 (A.P.).—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh's Ryan monoplane, in which he plans a New York-to-Paris flight, had a mishap today as the mail pilot was testing it. In landing the tail skid was broken as he successfully attempted to avoid a group of photographers snapping his return to earth after a test flight.

The America, three-motored Fokker airplane, to be used by Commander Richard E. Byrd in the trans-Atlantic flight attempt, was formally accepted today by the Trans-Oceanic Company, after it had successfully completed trials.

The big aircraft was turned over by the builders, the Atlantic Aircraft Corporation. The amount was not announced in a statement by Grover A. Whalen, vice president of the America Trans-Oceanic Company, of which Rodman Wannamaker

SHOTS NAB BAREFOOT BURGLAR IN BACK BAY

A barefooted burglar was captured at gun point early today in the Houghton Mifflin Building, No. 8 Arlington street, Back Bay, after a prolonged hunt in which three shots were fired and a ring of riot guns thrown around the area.

A second man escaped before the police arrived and a description of him was broadcast.

The captured man gave his name as Charles Marino, 24, of 165th street, Chicago. Police believe he is one of the gangsters ordered out of Chicago a few days ago. He said he was "working" alone.

Marino was arraigned in municipal court before Judge Murray charged with breaking and entering in the night time. He was held in $5,000.

POLA NEGRI SLIPS AWAY TO MARRY HER PRINCE

By EVELYN MACDONALD
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Serraincourt, France, May 14.—Heroine of many a screen romance, Pola Negri slipped off this afternoon for a quiet wedding ceremony with Prince Serge Mdivan of Georgia.

While hundreds of invited guests, representing the social and dramatic world of two continents, gathered at Pola's Chateau de Ruel for a garden party in celebration of the marriage, Pola and Prince Serge stole quietly away to the tiny village and were married by the mayor.

Only eleven persons composed the wedding party.

The witnesses for the bride were Casir De Hulvicz, god-father of Pola, and Prince Demidoff. The Prince's witnesses were Clifford B. Harmon, president of the International League of Aviators and M. Evenkli, Georgian ambassador to France.

The only other persons present at the wedding ceremony were the mother of the bride and the father of the bridegroom, his sister, aunt and uncle and M. and Mme. Jose Maria Sert.

SUNNY, MUDDY TRACK FOR DERBY; SAXON OUT

Louisville, Ky., May 14 (A.P.).—A muddy track for the horses, a beautiful day for the visitors marked Derby day for the fifty-third renewal of Kentucky's turf classic.

Showers Friday and early today softened the course at Churchill Downs and caused the withdrawal of one of the eighteen entries. Saxon would not start, his trainer said, because of a slight injury suffered during the trip from the east.

Others may be scratched away from the muddy going up to 45 minutes before post time.

The Louisville Times said today that Rolled Stocking, one of the outstanding candidates for the derby, had been sold by J. W. Parrish, Midway, Ky., banker to E. P. Waggoner, oil man and rancher of Electra, Tex., for $110,000.

Denial was made yesterday that the colt had been sold. Waggoner

POUND OF DYNAMITE SENT TO GOVERNOR BY MAIL

When the clerk picked up the package he glanced at its address. "Governor Fuller, State House," was scrawled on the package. In an instant the clerk was on the alert. The heavy wire with which the package was wrapped made him more confident that danger lurked in the bundle. He carried the bundle into the office of Assistant Postmaster Hanson, who permitted it to lie untouched until Chief Postoffice Inspector Park D. Colvin and Inspector James E. Sullivan arrived.

Sullivan took the package and obstracted the letter which was held to the package by the wire. The scrawls they found inside quickly told their own story.

EXPLOSION FEARED.

Then Sullivan, fearful that the bundle might be set with a time mechanism and explode at any moment, dropped the parcel into a bucket of water. After the package was allowed to soak for half an hour it was opened and the pound of dynamite was revealed.

While every available Federal officer was immediately assigned to the case, the greatest secrecy was imposed upon everyone. Not even the Governor, whose life was attempted, was told of the effort at his destruction until today.

Today, Secretary Herman A. MacDonald was shocked when he received the following letter from Chief Inspector Colvin:

GOVERNOR NOTIFIED.

"The enclosed threatening communication was found in the Burlington avenue parcel post station of this office May 10, bound to a parcel with wire. From its appearance an employe suspected that it might contain unmailable matter. It was withdrawn from the mails and turned over to Assistant Postmaster H. M. Hanson and by him turned over to this office. On examination by Inspector J. E. A. Sullivan the parcel was found to contain dynamite, which has been disposed of.

"This office has no clue as to the identity of the person who mailed it nor have we been able to determine in what section of the city the mailing took place.

(Signed)
"PARK D. COLVIN."

SECRET LET OUT.

Attached to the communication was the roughly scrawled letter of threat.

"We kept this a secret as long as we could, for fear the news of it would incite other anarchists and radicals to make attempts on the life of the Governor," Inspector Colvin told newspapermen.

In the ordinary course of events the package would have been delivered to the desk of a messenger and clerk who sits just outside the Governor's office at the State House. This messenger opens the mail. Frequently he performs this duty in the Governor's private office.

Had the package been delivered and opened, there is only speculation as to what would have happened. Had the dynamite exploded, there was sufficient of the explosive to have completely wrecked not only the office of the Governor but the surrounding offices as well.

GOVERNOR BEYOND REACH.

Governor Fuller has not been at his office all week, so that had the death package been delivered the target which the sender of the dynamite intended would have been missed.

A week ago the Governor strained a tendon in his leg and since that time he has been confined to his Beacon street home. Secretary MacDonald, immediately after receipt of the letter from the postal authorities, informed the Governor of the missive and its contents.

Under the low it was compulsory for the postal authorities to deliver the letter to the Governor. They had full authority to destroy the package itself as "unmailable matter," but the letter did not come under this category.

STRICT WATCH ON MAIL.

As a result of the finding of the dynamite in the mails, orders have gone forth to every postal station in the Greater Boston zone for clerks to use redoubled caution in handling mail addressed to Governor Fuller. The same orders apply to the mail addressed to Judge Webster Thayer, the trial judge in the Sacco-Vanzetti case and who sentenced them to die in the electric chair the week of July 10. The mail addressed to the members of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts who backed Judge Thayer's findings in the famous case is given the same careful scrutiny.

The handwriting on the package has been carefully preserved. The postal authorities have photostatic copies of the letter which was sent to the Governor. It is on these slender clues that the government men hope to run down the sender of the package.

Wrap Up, Carry Your Umbrella Is Tip; Save Straw Lid

Wraps for trippers to seaside and country and umbrellas for urban strollers are the week-end orders issued today by the comptroller of the local weather bureau.

Rigid observers of the straw hat tradition are promised fitful sunshine to carry out their annual revival rites, but are admonished officially that their fickle deity may require substantial sacrifice to bestow a smile.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday, probably with some showers; not much change in temperature; moderate east to south winds, shifting to westerly, Sunday.

'SUSPICION' IN DYNAMITE ACT

The Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee, in a statement issued through Gardner Jackson, one of its members, this afternoon, announced that it viewed the finding of the dynamite sent Governor Fuller "with profound suspicion."

The statement intimated that members of the committee regarded the sending of the dynamite was the work of some enemy of the two doomed radicals.

The statement follows:

"The Sacco-Vanzetti defence committee regards the act of placing the dynamite in the mail, addressed to Governor Fuller with profound suspicion. We ask the public to scrutinize this and similar acts most carefully and to recall instances in the past when dynamite threats have been discovered.

"We earnestly request the public to consider where the motives for such an act are most likely to be. We have implicit confidence in Governor Fuller's high purpose in approaching his decisions in the Sacco-Vanzetti case and consider it unnecessary to deny or deplore to him or anyone else this act which is certainly not the work of individuals looking for justice."

Boston Sergeant Assigned to Dynamite Case

When Michael H. Crowley, superintendent of the Boston police, learned of the finding of the dynamite he immediately detailed Sergeant Frank McNabb of the Back Bay station to the case. The city police, however, will permit the Federal authorities to have full charge in the search of the sender of the explosive.

Superintendent Crowley announced he would not place a police guard about the home of Governor Fuller of Beacon Hill until the Governor makes a request for such a guard.

BROKER WRITES ON SACCO CASE

Drawing a parallel between the Sacco-Vanzetti case and that of the McNamara dynamiters' case, Francis Ralston Welsh, Philadelphia investment broker, in a letter to Governor Fuller today, vigorously attacked Professor Felix Frankfurter and others working in behalf of the condemned men.

"The Sacco and Vanzetti case has an interesting parallel in the McNamara case, with the difference that the McNamaras confessed and so confounded those who, like Frankfurter, were carrying on false propaganda for those murderers," he wrote.

Hints Enemies of Sacco May Have Sent Dynamite

When told of the finding of dynamite in a package addressed to Governor Fuller, Atty. William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, declared that the public should be cautious in drawing its inferences. He said:

"The public should be cautious in drawing inferences from such occurrences as this. There are at least two classes in this country who agree in nothing else except a fierce desire for the death of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"To some individuals of either class the making of threats or more direct acts of violence against public officials might seem the surest way of preventing a calm and candid consideration of the case and thus of bringing about the desired result.

"When public feeling and excitement rise to a certain point almost anything may be expected from scoundels, whether crack-brained or of a more sinister type.

"Meantime, Sacco and Vanzetti and their real friends must continue to rely, as in the past, solely on an appeal to reason and conscience."

Gray Flays 'Primrose Path' From Cell

NEW YORK, May 14.—Farewell words of warning were issued by Henry Judd Gray from his cell after he had been sentenced to die. He wrote a message to the "public at large," denouncing the snares of the primrose path and pleading for a religious guidance for every one. Here is his message:

"I wish to take this opportunity of thanking the many kind Christians from all over the country who took time to pray for me and to send letters of sympathy and literature of faith. Would that I had time to answer each one. But your efforts have not been in vain, for I have been saved through our Lord, Jesus Christ, praise be to God. Amen.

"May I thank you also for the tender mercy you have shown my little family whose suffering has been so acute.

"It has been deeply appreciated by me in the face of my shame and sin. May the day come when people will clamor and fight to enter the churches to hear God's word as they did to enter this building to hear such sordid words of shame and sin. Would that every man and woman who is not living in keeping with the Commandments take heed from this case and turn to God for forgiveness.

"I am one of the best examples of what whiskey, lust and sin will ultimately lead one into.

"I have seen so many pitiful cases here as an inmate of this institution as to what liquor and improper relations will exact in payment that it makes me more than anxious to help my fellow-men see the light of God as their own salvation.

(Signed) H. JUDD GRAY."

SNYDER WIDOW SEES PRIEST

Long Island City, N. Y., May 14 (I.N.S.)—Ruth Brown Snyder, who on Monday will be taken in shackles to the death house in Sing Sing has developed "a profound sense of penitence," the Rev. Patrick Murphy, Catholic chaplain, said today after visiting her.

She has not, however, embraced religion as strongly as has Henry Judd Gray, who also makes the trip "up the river," Monday. In fact, she confided to one intimate in the Queens County Jail that she fears no church, nor God can ever forgive her for her sins.

Gray spends much of his time on his knees. He assures all those who talk to him that he has "made his peace with God." He will go to Sing Sing absolutely penniless, having signed over everything to his wife. He issued a statement from his cell warning young men to beware of rum and women, saying:

"I am one of the best examples of what whiskey, lust and sin will ultimately lead one into."

The condemned woman still clings to the hope expressed by her counsel that she can "beat the sentence and the electric chair." The appeal of her case is expected to be based principally on the court's refusal to grant her a separate trial.

Lawyers said Justice Townsend Scudder's refusal to grant separate trials was the first time a court had availed itself of that part of the Baumes laws giving a judge discretionary powers.

GIRL'S MARRED BEAUTY WILL BE RESTORED

Lowell, May 14.—"My beauty is marred! My beauty is marred! screamed Helen Tarella, 22-year-old beauty prize winner of No. 273 Rogers street, as she was placed on the operating table in St. John's Hospital today after an automobile accident in which she, her sister and three Harvard students figured.

It developed, however, that the beauty, aside from being shaken up and bruised, suffered no more serious injury than a slight gash over one eye, and this can be healed without leaving a noticeable scar, according to the doctors.

In the car at the time of the accident were W. M. Smart, Jr., of James Smith Hall, Cambridge; Gorham B. Harper, of Adams street, Milton, and John V. N. Sitch, of Smith Hall, Cambridge, together with Miss Tarella and her twenty-year-old sister, Tess.

The car was crossing Central bridge when it skidded in a car track and crashed into one of the bridge stanchions.

Police took the two girls and Smart to the hospital. The student and the younger girl were discharged after they had minor bruises and cuts dressed. The prize-winning beauty will be held in the hospital for a day or two.

Miss Tarella has won several medals and cups in beauty contests in Lowell.

SAYS SHE, NOT DOT, IS SLAIN STAR'S WIFE

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—The New York American today quoted Florence Bain Raymond, New York actress, as saying she was the wife of Ray Raymond, slain actor, and that he and Dorothy Mackaye, who claims to be his widow, were not legally married.

Florence Bain Raymond, the American says, claims she was married to the actor in Newark, N. J., on January 8, 1309, and was never divorced.

Miss Mackaye, a well-known actress, has been known as the wife of Raymond, for whose death Paul Kelly, film actor, now is on trial in Los Angeles. Miss Mackaye testified in the Kelly trial she and Raymond were married in "Gretna Green," Maryland, on August 1, 1921. There is no such town in Maryland.

Florence Raymond has retained Nathan Lieberman as her attorney and expresses a willingness to testify at Kelly's trial and also at that of Miss Mackaye, who is accused of concealing facts concerning the killing.

The American says Mrs. Raymond wired Prosecuting Attorney Keyes she was never legally separated or divorced from Raymond and was ready to go to California to protect her dower interests.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON HAPPENINGS IN SOCIETY CIRCLES

'Old King Cotton' with All His Modern 'Cousins' at Festive Hotel Statler Ball

OLD KING COTTON, THE OLD TIME FAVORITE, MOVED into the Hotel Statler last evening for the "Cotton Ball." And with him came all the new cousins in his family, the marvelous calfskin velvets; the shimmering, transparent rayons; the gossamer laces. And bright prints galore. And each and every one, no matter what its name or whatever its appearance, is "cotton" in a new manifestation, marvelous to behold and surprisingly lovely.

NEWEST OF THE NEW IN COTTON WAS THE LUSTROUS "VELVET" in black and white Mrs. George Richmond Fearing wore, done into a Cossack effect, with smart green boots. Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Fearing, 3d, was the maiden demure, in printed mull, her fluffy brown locks bound with green "velvet" ribbon. In all the crowded ballroom none was handsomer than Mrs. Alvan Tufts Fuller. The Du Barry, she, from the crown of her handsome white wig, to the tip of her jeweled slipper.

IF MRS. FULLER HADN'T BEEN ONE OF THE JUDGES, SERVING with J. Dudley Clark, her costume would certainly have taken a prize for beauty and period authenticity. The panniered gown was of Rose Du Barry cotton velvet, opening over a petticoat of ruffled cotton lace. Her jewels were long ropes of pearls, with a collar of pearls and diamonds worn closely about the neck. Mrs. Fuller was a dinner guest at Mr. Clark's, before the ball.

MISS CORNELIA CLARK, IN A GORGEOUS BLUE SATIN PIERETTE with collar a la Medici, led the grand march with B. Nason Hamlin. Mr. Hamlin and all the other ushers wore a costume of black dinner coat and white trousers, their badges of office broad red ribbons corner-wise across their shirt bosoms. Young Mr. Joseph W. Woods was an usher, and the charming Mrs. "Joe" Woods was distinguished in white net with a wig fashioned cleverly from cotton wadding. Mrs. Joseph F. Woods' red sateen cavalier cape and Mr. Woods' artist's smoke completed the Woods group.

MRS. NORMAN R. STURGIS (HARRIET WOODS) WAS THE sweet girl graduate of a decade or so ago, in a trained gown on mull and tiny roses banded in her hair. Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., wore a floppy leghorn hat with her sateen of yellow and orange, and Mrs. Chester Wardwell's enormous leghorn topped a rose costume with delicate cotton lace fischu and wide pan panniered skirt. An eccentric costume of cerise and orange, following the mode of the Cotton Ball and done in sateen, was Mrs. Dudley Howe's costume.

AN ADORABLE CREATURE IN ONE OF RAQUEL MELLER'S white Spanish creations, was Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. Her ruffled gown was of white maline and cotton lace, and a cascade of flowers sprayed from the belt. A high comb and a cotton lace mantilla completed the Meller effect. Mrs. George J. Engelman's Period gown was miraculously created from silken pompadour fabrics that were really cotton. A wig of white and sparkling jewels made her a French Marquise.

BACK INTO THE GAY NINETIES STEPPED MRS. S. HUNTINGTON WOLCOTT, and into a "tennis" costume, the same that convulsed the Vincent Club audiences when she did the "Mothers and Daughters" number in "Varieties" of pleasant memory. There was a pancake sailor hat perched on a high pompadour and the long, round linen skirt and waspwaist jacket with its balloon sleeves. A far cry, indeed, from today's "straight line" mode.

THE JUDGES COULDN'T DO ANYTHING ELSE THAN AWARD A prize to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw Sprague. Their cotton sateen costumes were handsome, done in the circus mode for the King and Queen of the Sawdust Ring. They wore white wigs and topped them with beaver hats exactly like circus performers. Of course the "groups" were extremely handsome. The Whitman group and the Richardson group were most effective.

THE RICHARDSON FAMILY, MR. AND MRS. F. L. W. RICHARDSON and their daughter and son, Miss Margery Richardson and Arthur Richardson, were East Indian, true to the last detail. The Whitmans, Mr. and Mrs. William Whitman, Jr., Miss Ruth Whitman, and Mr. and Mrs. William Whitman, 3d, were gay after the Russian manner, with handsome headdresses. Mrs. Charles P. Curtis, Jr., and Miss Rosamond Thomas were little maids of 1810, in tiny pancake hats and dimity gowns over pantalettes. Miss Peggy Porter was a maid, in sateen frock and frilly cotton apron.

MRS. NATHANIEL F. EMMONS' VERY HANDSOME WHITE rayon costume, with its hem of cotton fringe, very aptly demonstrated to just what luxurious lengths cotton has progressed since the days when it was the utilitarian thing of sheets and pillowslips, calicos and muslins. Mrs. Jacob C. Rogers was a Summer girl, with saucy hat and parasol of bright orange to set off her black gown. Mrs. Judd Dewey was in black. Mrs. John E. Parker was an Oriental in embroidered coat and trousers. Leighton Rollins was perfectly the Chinese from the tip of his lacquered hat to the tips of his padded shoes.

THE YOUNG SET WAS WELL REPRESENTED. MISS ESTHER UNDERWOOD was a French apache, in red tam and sweater and black trousers. Miss Mary Frances Oakes was in black, with a scarlet flower at her shoulder. Miss Hope Patterson wore a "Lido Venice" in petunia red. Miss Elizabeth Lyman's pink sateen frock was veiled in white net worn with a fischu. Miss Jessie Bancroft and Miss Helen Rust wore Pom Pom suits in soft rose pink, banded in and fashioned into pert little jackets and knee-length trousers. Miss Eleanor Frothingham wore rose done in the 1830 mode. Miss Nancy Morison was in checked gingham.

REFUSAL TO KNEEL TO BE BEHEADED SAVES LIFE

San Francisco, May 14 (A.P.).—Dr. Frank Price, professor of the Nanking Theological Seminary, escaped decapitation at the hands of Chinese because he refused to kneel, he declared on his arrival here aboard the liner Korea Maru.

The Chinese love of ceremony was declared by Dr. Price to be the only reason he escaped death at the executioner's axe. He said that when Chinese soldiers and mobs entered Nanking, Mrs. Price and her children escaped to an American gunboat. Dr. Price remained in the city, however, and was one of a group of Americans captured by the invaders, robbed and brutally treated.

"I was a prisoner eight hours," he said. "On seven occasions my captors threatened to kill me, ordering me to kneel with my head on the ground so they could behead me. This position for executions in China is rarely deviated from.

"I refused. It made my captors indignant. 'How then, can we cut off your head?' they complained. 'You're very unfair.' "

"I finally escaped."

SHOTS HALT TWO SEIZED AS SUSPECTS IN HOLDUP

Charged with holdup of a taxi-driver and robbing him of $17, two youths were captured by Brookline police today after a long chase in which shots were fired. They gave their names as Joseph Connolly, Cedar Park street, Roxbury, and Joseph Dwan, Williams street, Jamaica Plain.

Connolly and Dwan were arraigned in Brookline court before Judge Haskell today on the charge of highway robbery. They pleaded not guilty and were held under $7,500 bail each for a further hearing on May 20.

ARLINGTON GAS, QUINCY LIGHT RATES ARE CUT

Customers of the Quincy Electric Light & Power Company today scored a victory when the public utilities commission ordered it to reduce the maximum rate for electricity from nine cents a kilowatt hour to seven and one-half cents. The new rate will apply on all bills subsequent to May 31.

The Arlington Gas Light Company was today ordered by the commission to reduce its price charged for gas from $1.50 to $1.40 a thousand cubic feet. The new rate will apply on all bills rendered after May 31.

PROTEST RAIDS ON SOVIETS

Moscow, May 14 (I.N.S.) — The Soviet government is drafting a note of protest to England against the raids of the Soviet trade delegation headquarters, threatening economic reprisals, it was announced by the foreign office today. The note will probably be delivered tonight. It is understood that the Soviet proposes to cancel large industrial orders placed in England.

MRS. J. M. REGAN OF CHARLESTOWN DEAD

Mrs. Julia M. Regan, wife of Timothy J. Regan of No. 10 Sackville street, Charlestown, died at the City Hospital of pneumonia. Besides her husband, she is survived by four children, Walter, Alice, William and Eleanor. Two of her nephews, George R. Canty, United States trade commissioner in Europe, and Captain Daniel J. Canty, in charge of the American graves registration, are both overseas, and another nephew is J. Paul Canty, secretary to Gasper G. Bacon. The funeral will be held Monday morning with services at Saint Frances de Sales Church in Charlestown.

"LOOKS LIKE CAL AND AL," SAYS DEPEW OF 1928 RACE

Washington, May 14 (I. N. S.).—"It looks like Cal and Al." That's the way Chauncey M. Depew, veteran New York Senator, figures the 1928 presidential race.

Here on his annual visit to the capital, the ex-Senator said he believed there was no doubt about President Coolidge being renominated, and he believed Gov. Al Smith was the logical Democratic nominee. He predicted prohibition will not be an issue.

COOLIDGE CALLS GIBSON FOR CRUISER CONFERENCE

Washington, May 14 (I.N.S.).—Hugh S. Gibson, American minister to Switzerland, and head of the American delegation to the Geneva arms conference, was ordered today to return to Washington for consultation with President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg over the program which the Americans will present at the conference.

It is understood a program will be worked out here to be presented in opposition to the reported British program of drastically reducing the tonnage of cruisers.

TRAP BAREFOOT BURGLAR

house," Marino is quoted as having told his captors, when asked why he picked out an office building to rob.

Edward Carroll of the Back Bay Patrol, a private protective organization, making his rounds, sighted two men on the roof of the Houghton Mifflin Building.

They saw him at the same instant, he said, and started a mad race over rooftops. Carroll opened fire and sent three shots after them. None, so far as is known, took effect.

Patrolmen James Kerrigan and Charles Lenz of Station 16, doing plainclothes work in the district, heard the shooting and reached the scene a few minutes later.

TAXI BLOCKS ESCAPE.

Meanwhile Carroll stopped a passing taxicab, operated by Forrest Eldred and ordered him to turn his macine into the mouth of a private alley on the south side of the building, thus plugging up a possible source of escape and giving the full benefit of the taxi's headlights in the hunt.

Kerrigan sent a riot call to Station 16 and a squad of police, with shotguns and searchlights, responded.

While Carroll stood guard outside, Lenz and Kerrigan, with drawn revolvers, went into the building. On the second floor, behind the door of an office occupied by the Atlantic Monthly magazine, they found Marino. He offered no resistance. He wore no shoes, police said.

OFFICE RANSACKED.

Meanwhile the other police officers had been deployed around the entire block to apprehend the second burglar but he had apparently reached the street before the cordon was established.

BRITISH SCHOLAR CHIEF CHILDREN'S HOUR SPEAKER

The federal idea of government which had its world birth in the American Revolution ceased to advance in the United States with the adoption of the Constitution, and its progress has been most conspicuous in the dominions of the British Empire, Boston school children were told today in the Old South Meeting House by K. Capper Johnson of Queen's College, Oxford, and H. P. Davison scholar at Harvard.

He was the principal figure in the Children's Hour, arranged by the Mary Hemenway Foundation, and spoke on self-government and federal government.

DAVIS HITS 3D-TERM TALK AS 'FOOLISH'

Persons who are pessimistic about the industrial future of New England were laughed at today by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who delivered the principal oration at the dedication of the John W. Weeks Memorial Bridge.

"New England, with its ingenuity, labor, leadership and brains, will remain in the forefront in the future as it has in the past," Secretary Davis declared.

In addition to Secretary Davis President Lowell of Harvard and Henry Hornblower, who for many years was a business associate of the late Secretary of War Weeks, participated in the dedication of the bridge.

Detachments of army, navy, marine and Coast Guard forces stationed about Boston gave a semi-military aspect to the celebration.

The bridge, a gift from the former associates and friends of Secretary of War Weeks, was formally presented to Harvard College by Mr Hornblower. President Lowell received the bridge on behalf of the Harvard Corporation and then formally turned it over to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

LAUDS COOLIDGE, TOO.

Amplifiers carried the exercises to both sides of the river and there was a throng on either shore. The bridge connects Harvard University and the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Secretary Davis, who arrived in Boston from Washington early today, was the guest of Mr. Hornblower at the Hornblower home at No. 89 Mt. Vernon street.

In addition to discussing Boston's future prosperity, the Secretary took occasion to pay his respects to his chief, President Calvin Coolidge, and predict that Coolidge will win hands down, if he is a candidate. He flayed Republicans who talk "third term" as allies of the Democrats.

"The fact that New England has lost a few industries causes some people to think that it is going backward," said Secretary Davis. "That is emphatically not the case.

"New England ingenuity, labor, leadership and brains—with the potential financial powers that are available—will keep it in the forefront.

FAVORS HIGH TARIFF.

"It is up to the labor people of the United States to seek a higher tariff for their own protection. A surprising number of manufacturers, who formerly were for a high tariff, have now gone into the importing business and are no longer interested in whether or not our home markets are protected.

"Cheap products of the world are being brought into the United States because of the low tariff on many commodities. These naturally compete with our own products. The workers themselves must rise and demand higher tariffs."

Speaking of President Coolidge's availability for another term, Secretary Davis said:

ONLY ONE ISSUE.

"Lots of foolish Republicans are lining up with Democrats in referring to President Coolidge as a 'third term' candidate. This is the only 'issue' the Democrats have been able to stir up. I am not a prophet, but if President Coolidge runs for office again he will have a bigger vote than last time. The sentiment of high labor leaders throughout the country is 'Coolidge is good enough for us.' The 'third term' issue is already flattened out like a pancake."

Secretary Davis, in discussing conditions in Boston, declared the Hub, along with every other American city of size, should have a large aviation field to accommodate the needs of our rapidly developing air traffic. This field, regardless of the cost, he said, should be located near the centre of the city.

Writ in Lynn Chinaman's Suit Served on Davis Here

A writ of mandamus demanding that he come into Federal Court here and show reason why Ng Ah Cung, Lynn Chinese, may not get permission to visit China, was served on Secretary of Labor James J. Davis by U. S. Deputy Marshal Ralph Gray today.

Davis was at the home of Henry Hornblower when the deputy marshal served the writ. It is the last move in the Lynn restaurant owner's fight to be allowed permission to visit China.

His attorneys, Harold Sullivan and Edward J. Casey, have been fighting emigration authorities, who charge Cung is not an American citizen. He bases his claim for citizenship on the certificate of a United States commissioner granted him at Malone, N. Y., twenty years ago. Emigration authorities claim it is a forgery.

ACTRESS SAYS DOT NOT WED TO RAYMOND

the next session of court to "explain."

Miss Mackaye, actress widow of Raymond, testifying as an unwilling witness for the prosecution, left a strange story of errant affections incomplete as she told of circumstances leading up to the fist fight between Raymond, her song and dance husband, and Kelly, young film actor. The State charges the fist fight caused Raymond's death.

After reading to the jury love letters and affectionately phrased telegrams which revealed the passion between the actress and Kelly, Miss Mackaye struck at the reputation of her husband by branding him as a drunkard and a wife beater.

LAUGHS AT HER STORY.

She told of an attack made upon her by Raymond last New Year's eve when he beat her and dragged her into a closet.

Several times under cross-examination by Kelly's attorney, W. I. Gilbert, as she told of her husband's "hangovers," she joined in the laughter of the audience. Frequently she smiled.

"The man is in his grave and can't defend himself," stormed Deputy District Attorney Forrest Murray. "I don't see what difference it makes if he were drunk or sober when he was beaten and murdered."

But the voice of Raymond was heard in the trial when the prosecution read what it termed its "trump card," a telegram from the actor on the road with his show to his wife, replying to one in which she had asked for a loan of $200.

"You are my wife and mother of my baby," it read, "there is no such thing as a loan. My heart is breaking, Dorothy. For God's sake let me know immediately what this is all about."

Accompanying the message was a money transfer order sending $200 to Miss Mackaye. The telegram had been sent April 13, thirteen days prior to the fist fight between the actors.

HE SENT HER LOVE.

Another telegram signed by Raymond and sent to Miss Mackaye was dated April. It read:

"Cannot understand no answer to my wire. Closing Monterey Thursday. Arrive Los Angeles Friday. Please meet me Stanford Theatre, Palo Alto, today. Love, Ray."

The other letters and telegrams which revealed the love of Kelly for the actress were introduced in a less one-sided form, telegrams from Miss Mackaye to the film actor also being given. Kelly's missives were filled with terms of endearment and occasional passages in schoolboy code which Miss Mackaye translated, in which he spoke of her as "my wife." "E. Mr. P. M. K." became "the elegant Mr. and Mrs. Paul Michael Kelly" when translated by Miss Mackaye.

Los Angeles, May 14 (I.N.S.).—Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress and central figure in the Paul Kelly murder trial, issued a statement today reaffirming that she and Ray Raymond, for whose death the film player is on trial, were legally married.

PLEDGES AID TO GET BIG HUB AUDITORIUM

The Chamber of Commerce today pledged its aid to the movement to bring about the erection of a huge auditorium in Boston in order that great national conventions may be accommodated.

Without mincing words, the Chamber committee on conventions, backed up by the directors, asserted that many national conventions have desired to meet here, but have not done so because of the lack of an auditorium large enough.

The only thing lacking to make the Hub a great convention city—the "National Convention City of the Northeast"—is a conveniently situated and suitable auditorium, the committee on conventions reported to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

The announcement made yesterday by Tex Rickard and the Boston & Maine Railroad, revealing that negotiations are under way for construction of an immense sport arena at the North Station—as published exclusively in the Boston Evening American—indicates one way in which this need may eventually be met, but the Chamber of Commerce does not, as yet, favor any particular project or plan.

If Boston is to attract large national conventions it must be prepared not only to handle in a comfortable and adequate way delegates and visitors from a hotel standpoint, but also from an auditorium point of view, the directors of the Chamber declared.

"Boston has many auditoriums which can handle some of the conventions here in the city, but large national conventions meeting in Boston have been unable to get together under one roof and must resort to holding their meetings by groups in several existing halls," said the committee on conventions in its report.

"With the large number of national conventions desiring to meet in Boston, resulting from the intensive efforts now being put forth to develop the convention possibilities of the city, the need for a suitable auditorium is pronounced and self-evident."

WHEELER BEGS COOLIDGE TO APPOINT HAYNES

Washington, May 14 (I.N.S.).—A final effort was made today by Wayne B. Wheeler, generalissimo of the Anti-Saloon League, to persuade President Coolidge to go over the head of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and appoint Roy A. Haynes as prohibition commissioner. Wheeler was closeted with Mr. Coolidge for almost an hour.

Secretary Mellon is understood to be opposed to naming Haynes.

AND SO THEY ARE!

Some Men Just Know Everything.

While ardently apostrophizing his lady, Sam Weller of "Pickwick" exclaims, "Afore I seed yer I thought all women was alike." Somewhat alarmed by this denial of family philosophy, the elder Weller hastens to remind the erring Sam: "And so they are, my son."

STAGE AND SCREEN

You Can't Keep This Boy Away.

Phil Spitalny, who is generally held as Marcus Loew's principal ace in jazz-maniac melody, wires from somewhere in the great Middle West that before many weeks he will return to his own hot corner in the orchestra pit at Mr. Loew's uptown playhouse.

TUNES, TEMPERS AND ALL THAT IS DRAMA WELL STOCKED IN NEW WEEK'S BILLS

THIS REALLY HAPPENS in "Katja," the new musical comedy operetta (retaining the best features of each) coming to the Shubert Monday. Here are Valodia Vestoff and Martha Mason as the Spirit of Free Air, or something.

MR. PICKWICK entertains a large delegation, so Tony Weller attends in a body. Both being bibulous gentlemen with "wery great powers of suction," it's quite a party. John Cumberland and Bruce Winton in "Pickwick" (Majestic).

MARGARET MULLEN steps into the cast of "The Ghost Train" at the Copley to reinforce Mr. Clive's energetic and artistic menage.

SOUNDLESS "BOZO" and his "Big Noise," Sam Green, cut many a caper on the stage of the Gayety these days in "His Own Show," a whirling concoction of burlesque that keeps patrons rolling over in the chairs.

UNWISE WOOING in "Night Hawk" at the Park. Carroll McComas and Martin Burton give highly dramatic proof that the way of the transgressor is anything but easy.

ANYWAY, CLIVE HAS LAUGH ON GOTHAM

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE elusive Mr. Clive of Upper Stuart Street has at last made up his mind. "The Ghost Train" will continue its intriguing way for one more week—just one—the twenty-first, if you care to calculate in ponderous totals. Those who have followed the fortunes of Mr. Clive during his rise from an atom in local theatrical production must have taken notice of his many irregularities in the eternal combat with art. The capriciousness of his operations, however, have not been in any sense unethical, for Mr. Clive is a gleaming example of theatrical virtue. But of courage, of boldness and just unsophisticated nerve there is none locally, and we can recall no one nationally, who has accepted longer chances with a smile or who has smacked his lips with prosperity and still retained the same sized hat band.

SMASHING a season's record in consecutive performances is not usually the good fortune of a playhouse molded in popular prices. Yet the remarkable run of "The Ghost Train" is no more a particular achievement for the play than it is an item of credit for the far-seeing eye of E. E. Clive. For, it may be remembered, "The Ghost Train" had already been done in New York, at Broadway tariffs, with no astounding results. Plainly, the results were even less than that. But in the Clive production there was no tampering with the author's manuscript: An English play, it was staged as an English play—and it thrilled earnest patrons far beyond the allotted time of such things. The more astute New Yorkers, attempting to improve upon the author, made alterations in the text, changed the locale, and finally discovered they had purchased for themselves a first-class failure.

JUST what effect the difference in prices between Broadway and Stuart street may have had in the final reckoning may never be known, but there is unmistakable evidence that Mr. Clive must have had some very clear notion of play values when he embraced the comedy for service at the Copley.

• • •

JUST what to do with Shubert comedians in their off-stage and idle moments seems to have been solved by the funsters themselves. Billy B. Van, perhaps the best-known clown on the Shubert payroll, is now frolicking at his home in Newport, N. H., and spending all his spare time thinking up new ways of selling his own pet product, Pine Tree Soap. Mr. Van says this soap is simply great for anyone needing a bath. Turning back to Broadway, we hear that George Hassell, cyclopean comic with "The Circus Princess," has just turned out his autobiography under the title of "Twenty-five Years of Making People Laugh," which has been accepted by a London publisher. With no intention of being mordacious, we honestly think there is more money in soap.

LYING DOWN ON THE JOB

DOROTHY CASEY, the sixteen-year-old specialty dancer of "Judy" at the Tremont, is generally quick on her feet, but after much persuasion she consented to lie quiet enough to have her picture taken.

One o' the Family

LUCY MUNROE plays with the Stone folks in "Criss Cross" and helps Father Fred add excellence to this spirited Colonial show.

FIVE FIGURES, FOUR WORDS

Baseball magnates have paid huge sums of money for baseball players, publishers have paid huge sums of money for books, but William Fox seems to have the record. He paid $50,000 for the use of four words.

That tidy amount was paid to the estate of the late James O'Neill, actor, for the right to use four words that made O'Neill universally famous, "The World Is Mine." That sentence is indissolubly associated throughout the world, with the master play, "Count of Monte Cristo," which appears now in film form on the screen of the Olympia and Fenway.

Thousands of theatre patrons who have never heard of the elder Dumas are familiar with the phrase used in what is called the greatest romance of all history. Singularly enough, Dumas did not write "The world is mine!" nor does the line appear in any of the French editions of the novel. Its authorship is credited to O'Neill, who played in the spoken drama the wonderful story of Edmond Dantes for over a quarter of a century and appeared in all the principal cities of the world.

"The world is mine!" as used by O'Neill is generally regarded as the climax that is the best known on the spoken stage.

Movies May Now Struggle Along Without Him

A veteran of sixteen stands in the wings of the Majestic, where he ponderously portrays Joe the Fat Boy in "Pickwick," and decides that he likes the stage better than the screen.

He is Maxime Pamada, and he weighs 210 pounds. Towering above five feet and boasting a full and jovial face that always seems in slumber, just as in the play, Maxime tells of a French father and a Spanish mother, both of whom are slender. Where he got his prodigious weight from he cannot guess, but he paraphrases an old saying to the effect that his frame is his fortune.

As it is, indeed, in the light of his experience. When he was young (that is, for this old-timer, before he reached his first teens) he went into the movies through the late May Hull.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

SHUBERT—"Katja," a comedy-operetta. Book by Frederick Lonsdale; lyrics by Harry Graham; music by Jean Gilbert. Already has had tremendous vogue in Europe, with hardly less popularity in New York and Chicago. In the cast are Madeleine Collins, Leonard Ceeley, Jack Sheehan, Doris Patston, Oscar Figman, Teddy Webb and Helen Gilligan. Staged by Lew Morton, with dances by Max Theck. Produced by the Shuberts.

MUSIC YEAR IN RETROSPECT

By MOSES SMITH

Now that the concert season of 1926-27 has passed and can be seen in retrospect, it appears as one of the most memorable in the history of Boston music.

Serge Koussevitzky

Overshadowing every other individual achievement was the Beethoven Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky In the space of one week all nine of the master's symphonies and a program of his chamber music, as well as the great Mass, were rendered before large audiences—the most impressive tribute to the composer anywhere outside of his own Vienna.

This impressiveness aside, the chief thing that the Festival brought out was the marvelous finish that the local orchestra has attained in the three years since Mr. Koussevitzky took its helm. The gifted Russian's interpretations are often open to question, but no one can listen to this superbly virtuosic group without having his blood course the more freely. For sheer magnificence of tonal splendor it is hard to imagine any orchestra in the world surpassing the Boston Symphony.

In its approximately sixty concerts in and about Boston, and practically the same number on the road, there was generally the same story to tell—crowded houses. But the miscellaneous concerts in Boston by individual artists and groups did not fare so well. The symphony aside, it was a hard life for the performing musician this season. This in spite of the fact that, artistically, the musical level of concerts was at least as high as during previous years. Of course there were exceptions—such performers as Kreisler, McCormack and Roland Hayes played to their customary crowded houses.

The Chicago Opera Company came and went, but in the short period of two weeks it left this otherwise operaless town the richer for having heard again such immortal music as Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde." Chamber music was not too plentiful, but one remembers gratefully the Flonzaleys on their regular visits, Mischa Elman's quartet on its first appearance, and numerous others.

POPS PIECES FOR TONIGHT

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall are about to enter upon the third week of their 42d season, which promises to be the finest the Pops have ever had owing principally to the qualities of Alfredo Casella, the distinguished new conductor. Coming features will be Harvard night on Monday, and a Symphonic program on Sunday, May 22.

Tonight's program follows:

Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro"	Mozart
Ballet Music	Gluck-Mottl
Tambourin—Gavotte—Chaconne
Turkish March from "The Ruins of Athens"	Beethoven
Ride of the Valkyries from "The Valkyrie"	Wagner
Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba"	Gounod
Suite, "Namouna"	Lalo
"Children's Corner," Suite	Debussy-Caplet
Doctor Gradus and Parnassum, Jumbo's Serenade for a Doll, Golliwogg's Cake-walk.
"Espana," Rhapsody	Chabrier
Indian Sketches	Gilbert
Prelude—Invocation—Snake Dance
Largo	Handel
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
Pomp and Circumstance	Elgar

Greatest Barrymore Film Re-issued at Liberty

The cause of cinematic art in the nether regions of Dorchester is honored with something more than a passing nod. Desiring to afford his patrons a fling at any of the silent drama's former triumphs that they may care to review on the screen, Mr. Markel has arranged a series of request programs every Wednesday and Thursday at the Liberty Theatre on Blue Hill avenue, one of his flourishing string of neighborhood houses. His next bill is "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with John Barrymore, and "Grumpy," with Theodore Roberts. The Barrymore film is regarded now as one of the greatest things ever achieved in the history of photoplays.

DANCING IS NOT MERE MOTION

To dance—in all its variety of manifestations—is the current fad of at least 75 per cent. of women. If it is not the ballroom steps, it is the so-called classic, interpretative, or physical-culture dance-cults. To overcome physical handicaps, to make the body stronger, more beautiful, seems to be the sole aim of these dance aspirants. While to many this may seem an altogether laudable motive, Amy Revere—pretty, clever and 20—one of the principals of "Yes, Yes, Yvette," at the Wilbur, believes that the dance has a more important purpose than that.

Amy Revere

"The dance," says Miss Revere, "should be used as a spiritual touchstone instead of a physical panacea. It is one of the greatest inspirational forces in the world, generating a tremendous creative power in the dancer.

"It is true," she continues, "that physical imperfections can be cured by various bodily postures and movements, but to compare this system of calisthenics with dancing is like comparing a pictured advertisement of a certain new health cereal with da Vinci's Mona Lisa.

"Most dancers, whether professional or amateur, lack the ability to give of themselves—to make their minds use their bodies as instruments of expression. They must interpret some of the truth of life as expressed through music and the dance."

Second Cushman Club Tea to Be Held On Tuesday

The second in the series of Tea Dansants given in aid of the building fund of the Charlotte Cushman Club will take place on next Tuesday afternoon, May 17, at 4 o'clock at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

The inaugural event given by this club, which is being sponsored by prominent Bostonians both in and out of the theatre, was generously attended.

LOIS MORAN HAS STAR SUPPORT

Lois Moran, the little lady who started up the starring ladder in "Stella Dallas," has at last attained the top rung. She is starred in Paramount's picture version of A. Hamilton Gibbs' novel "Soundings," now going under the film title of "The Whirlwind of Youth," at the Metropolitan.

Nor is Miss Moran's supporting cast one that's lightly to be disposed of. Vera Voronina, Paramount's new foreign importation, gives promise of great things. Although this is her first American appearance, it bids to be far from her last. Donald Keith, popular young leading man, is said to contribute an even finer portrayal than he did to "The Plastic Age." Alyce Mills, Richard Dix' leading woman in "Say It Again" is the third featured player. Then, to round off, Gareth Hughes, Larry Kent and Charles Lane, three capable "troupers," were assigned important parts. Rowland V. Lee, megaphonist on "Havoc," "As No Man Has Loved" and Pola Negri's "Barbed Wire," directed.

Wears Uniform with Good Reason in "Night Hawk"

Pam Browning, who plays the role of sympathetic nurse in "Night Hawk," at the Park, greatly enjoys wearing her nurse's white uniform on the stage.

Pam Browning

"When I first wore one of these," she says, "I had not the slightest idea I ever would wear one on the stage. Nor, for that matter, did I have any idea I ever would see a theatre from the far side of of the footlights."

For Miss Browning is an honest-to-goodness nurse with a diploma and everything from the Nurses' Training School of Dubuque, Ia. Although her success on the stage has proved she really is a good actress, Miss Browning did not realize she possessed histrionic talent until after she had graduated and taken up nursing as a profession.

GALS AND GOVERNMENT

"THE TELEPHONE GIRL" at the Scollay is a film in which Madge Bellamy (at left) and Mae Allison discover that getting the wrong number sometimes makes things safe for democracy.

Some People Have All the Fun. Tommy O'Brien, who makes all off-stage noise in "The Ghost Train" at the Copley (and there is plenty of it) comes naturally by his skill in creating hair-raising affects, having learned his trade through three seasons of hard study with that sturdy thriller, "The Bat."

STAGE AND SCREEN

And He Also Does Steam Fitting. Charles Williams, comedian in "Judy" at the Tremont, is the newest and youngest male member of the cast. Besides being an actor of parts, he also rates high with his producer and employer as the author of a play, "That's The Stuff," soon to be staged.

NEW FILMS, ALL FLAVORS, ARRIVE TO TICKLE THE TASTE OF THE EAGER PATRON

IN THE ARMY NOW. Lois Moran finds the uniform she likes and joins Donald Keith in the war sequences of "The Whirlwind of Youth" at the Metropolitan. Sizeable fillum, they say!

EAST IS NOT WEST as Louise Dresser discovers when confronted with the prospect of a little Chinese girl (Renee Adoree) for her daughter-in-law in Lon Chaney's new thriller, "Mr. Wu" (State).

"THE YANKEE CLIPPER" makes no reference to navy barbers, but Julia Faye is of the opinion that William Boyd needs another haircut in this new film at the Modern and Beacon. She's right. He does.

DRESSED TO KILL is John Gilbert in "Monte Cristo" (Olympia and Fenway) as he inquires from Virginia Faire the whereabouts of his enemies. When found, these boys are in for a good sharp skewering.

CROSS MARKS THE SPOT where Karl Dane fell for pretty Eileen Sedgwick in "Slide, Kelly, Slide," the film of big league romance at the Orpheum.

DANCES WAY TO STARDOM IN FILMS

Madge Bellamy, who has achieved prominence on the screen during the past six years, began life in Hillsboro, Texas. At the age of four Madge started studying dancing in New York. Later she returned to Texas, attending school in San Antonio. At fifteen she advanced upon New York armed with letters of introduction. One proved an open sesame to an engagement in "The Love Mill."

Madge Bellamy

Daniel Frohman, dean of American theatrical producers, secured her to dance at an actor's benefit. Her speaking voice so impressed him that he recommended her to George Tyler. She followed Patricia Collinge in the title role of "Pollyanna" on a six-months' tour. Madge then followed Helen Hayes in "Dear Brutus" under the Frohman management.

About that time Thomas H. Ince, the late motion picture producer, was seeking a beautiful girl who could act. The fortunate lady possessing those qualifications was to be groomed for stardom. Miss Bellamy was one of five hundred candidates to be given screen tests and the only one chosen.

Eva Le Gallienne Comes to the Hollis May 30th

What promises to be a most notable contribution to Boston's theatrical season comes near its very end, on May 30, when Eva Le Gallienne and her company of Civic Repertory Theatre players appear for a single week in three plays.

Eva Le Gallienne

The schedule of her eight performances at the Hollis Street Theatre the week of May 30, nominates for Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Wednesday matinee, "The Cradle Song"; Tuesday evening and Saturday matinee, "The Master Builder," and for only a single performance, Wednesday evening, "La Locandiera."

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Al Herman, blackface comedian, in his own act in which he characterizes himself as "The Assassin of Grief"; Kikuta Japs, group of Oriental wonder workers; Nick and Gladys Verga in a travesty on the game of golf which is called, "Out of the Rough"; Clifton and Brent in the skit "Rubbernecks and Rubberlegs"; Gene and Myrtle Moore in "Bits and Hits of Broadway"; Vernon Rathburn, juvenile saxophonist, and others. The feature film is "Slide, Kelly, Slide," with William Haines.

B. F. KEITH'S—Frances Starr, legitimate actress, in the playlet, "Champagne and Roses"; Al Shean and Lynn Cantor in the skit, Business Is Business"; Fred Allen and Bert Yorke, comedians, in "The Efficiency Men"; Ethel Davis, singing comedienne; Billy Farrell, dancing star, and company in the skit, "The Prodigal Son"; Sheldon, Heft and Lewis in "Two Jacks and a Jill"; Fantino Sisters, and others.

FILM FARE FOR NEW WEEK

METROPOLITAN—(Starting today) Lois Moran in "The Whirlwind of Youth" (first run), adapted from the A. Hamilton Gibbs novel, "Soundings." Dramatic romance of a little girl whose dream of love is shattered against the World War's sweeping background. Included in the cast are Verona Voronina, Donald Keith, Alyce Mills, Larry Kent and Gareth Hughes. Rowland V. Lee directed. A Paramount picture. On the stage, John Murray Anderson's "Birthstones," and Gene Rodemich's Merry Makers band.

LOEW'S STATE—Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu" (first run), adapted from the Henry Maurice Vernon and Harold Owen play. Tragedy of a proud and vengeful Chinaman and his great hate for an English family who had wronged him. Also in the cast are Renee Adoree, Anna May Wong, Ralph Forbes, Louise Dresser and Gertrude Olmstead. William Nigh directed. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. On stage, "The Chinese Syncopators."

OLYMPIA AND FENWAY—(Today at the Fenway, tomorrow at the Olympia) "Monte Cristo" (a re-issue), adapted from the Alexander Dumas novel. Romantic drama of a man who languished in prison, escaped and lived to see the end of all his enemies. In the cast are John Gilbert, Renee Adoree, Estelle Taylor and George Siegmann. Emmett Flynn directed. A William Fox picture. Vaudeville at Olympia. Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery" at the Fenway.

MODERN AND BEACON—(Starting today) "The Yankee Clipper" (first run), adapted from the story by Denison Clift. Romantic drama and epic tale of American maritime history. The cast includes William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Julia Faye and Walter Long. Rupert Julian directed. A Producers' picture. Also the first run feature, "White Flannels," a "mother" story by Lucian Cary, with Louise Dresser and Jason Robards. Lloyd Bacon directed. A Warner Brothers' picture.

SCOLLAY—Madge Bellamy in "The Telephone Girl" (first run) adapted from the William De Mille stage play, "The Woman." Melodrama with a political background—a quick-witted girl outguesses the schemers. Others in the cast are Holbrook Blinn, Warner Baxter, Mae Allison, Lawrence Gray and Hale Hamilton. Herbert Breonon directed. A Paramount picture. Also vaudeville.

• • •

NEW BOSTON—(Starting tomorrow) Betty Bronson in "Ritzy" (first run), adapted from the Elinor Glyn story. Comedy romance of a little girl who yearns for a "high hat"—and gets it in a peculiar manner. Other players are James Hall and Joan Standing. Richard Rosson directed. A Paramount picture. Also vaudeville.

IRENE FRANKLIN DUE

Irene Franklin, celebrated "redhead" of the stage, is returning to Boston and will appear for the first time at popular prices at Loew's Orpheum the entire week of May 23.

MARTEL IS BACK

Arthur Martel, the popular Boston organist, returns today to the Metropolitan. Mr. Martel, who has been on tour throughout the South for nearly a year, will succeed Harold Ramsay.

HARRY CAREY GOES LAME FOR ART

After having had to "walk lame" for six weeks or more, to play a picture role, Harry Carey achieved real lameness—in the last scene in which he appears in "Slide, Kelly, Slide," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new baseball romance coming to the Orpheum Monday.

Carey plays a veteran catcher, in his last year of usefulness in a big league team, his lameness just beginning to hamper him and start him toward the road of "hasbeen," the most pathetic role in the picture, and, in fact, in real-life baseball.

He carefully cultivated the slight limp he used throughout the picture. In his last scene, in which he makes a desperate run for the home plate, Carey, who in his college days was a champion sprinter, tried to run and still keep the effect of the limp. The result was a twisted muscle known to athletes as a "Charley Horse"—and then he really became lame—so that he was really limping and not acting in these sequences in the film.

"Bozo" Does His Chores in Sweet, Soothing Silence

Tommy ("Bozo") Snyder, who continues to keep audiences at the Gayety in a state of hilarity, has only one rule for extracting humor out of any situation—leave something to the imagination of the audience.

He works on that rule at every show, for he never speaks, and only through his facial expressions does he let the audiences know what he is thinking about. And the audience always sees the point. He and his partner, Sam Green, have worked together for so many years that Green always says what he should say, and does all the talking necessary for both while the two men are on the stage.

"Bozo's" face is today so expressive that Green insists Bozo could reicte the Declaration of Independence without ever speaking a word.

The First Thousand Are the Best.

Valodia Vestoff, a dancing genius with "Katja" at the Shubert, is another artist whose American debut is credited to the revolution in Russia. M. Vestoff appears to have been born to his job, as his mother once shone as a bright star in the Imperial Ballet.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Tilting a Bit on New Philosophy.

Carroll McComas, of "Night Hawk," makes her own studies of life, and rises to remark: "The fool never puts of until tomorrow what he shouldn't do today." And then she adds: "It isn't always the girl with the most cheek who does most of the blushing."

CONFUCIUS IS BRUSHED UP FOR USE

Modern business efficiency is not so new!

More than two thousand years ago some of its pet principles, as expounded today in Rotary Clubs and similar organizations, designed for the good of business methods, were popular proverbs in China, cradle of civilization. They have echoed down the ages in the sayings of K'ung-Foo-Tsze or Confucius—probably the world's first efficiency expert.

This is the belief of Lon Chaney, after a study of Chinese lore, incidental to his role in "Mr. Wu," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of Chinese intrigue, mystery and revenge, coming Monday to Loew's State.

"Although thousands of years old," says Chaney, "the Confucian analects fit modern business slogans perfectly. Consider some of them:

" 'Why use an ox-knife to kill a fowl?'

" 'Wisdom consists of knowing what is to be done, and knowing the proper person to do it.'

" 'Prince Cheng, frightened by a harmless serpent, stepped from the beaten path into the forest—and a tiger ate him.'

"Then there is one with perhaps a more sinister meaning: 'If you wound a tiger and do not kill him you become his prey.' "

The First of the Lowells Breaks Into the Drama

Alice Lowell

One of the attractive members of Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company at the Plymouth is Miss Alice Lowell, a cousin of President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University. This is Miss Lowell's first stage experience and so far the records show she is the first member of the illustrious Lowell family to turn to the stage for a career.

Miss Lowell is the daughter of Frederick E. Lowell, the well known landscape artist, who held an exhibition at the Bailey Gallery on Newbury street last year. She was born in Boston, but lived for most of her childhood in Concord.

FAIR COMEDIENNES THREE

JOBYNA RALSTON is the girl you admire and Eddie Cantor is the boy you laugh at in "Special Delivery" (Fenway).

RUTH SHEPLEY is greatly responsible for keeping the farce up to concert pitch in "Some Girl," new show at the St. James.

BETTY BRONSON turns "Ritzy" in the same named Elinor Glyn film at the new Boston next week.

Film Futures

MAY 21—
Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie" at the Metropolitan.

NUNGESSER FILM

On account of the world wide interest in the fate of the French flying ace, Captain Nungesser, the management of Loew's State have procured a two-reel film special made by the great airman during a recent visit to this country. It is called "The Sky Raider" and will be shown all next week.

MARTELLE AT ST. JAMES FOR WEEK

Tommy Martelle, who today ranks as one of America's greatest female impersonators, will play the leading role in "Some Girl," the new play at the St. James.

As a boy he had a good soprano voice which was well-trained. When he grew older he found that, although his voice had "changed," he could still summon the treble tones.

He also had a flair for noting costumes. When a club he belonged to put on a show, he was selected to have charge of the costumes. Some of the men in the club had to play "girl" roles. Martelle was tried out by the professional coach, and given the leading character and he made a big hit.

His sucess was so great that he received several offers from theatrical men which were impossible to refuse; and so his professional career was launched.

"Katja" Understudy Held as Anchor to Windward

Helen Gilligan

Helen Gilligan of "Katja," the new musical comedy coming Monday to the Shubert, is being carefully groomed for important roles. On two different occasions she has jumped to the front when the need arose and kept a show going. Miss Gilligan comes from a little town named Pascoay, R. I., which even the press agent of the show admits is a new one on him. Careful research shows that it is located in the general vicinity of Providence.

Last season she got a bit in "Princess Flavia" and when Evelyn Herbert was suddenly taken ill in Buffalo, Helen volunteered the information that she knew the part and business thoroughly. With much misgiving they let her go on and she proved she knew what she was talking about. Again in Boston she was called on to save the day. Now she's understudying the title role in "Katja."

WHAT'S WHAT With Shows REMAINING

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"Judy" at the Tremont. (Second week.) The ways of a maid are curious, as Charles Purcell discovered when he meets Queenie Smith.

* * *

Tommy "Bozo" Snyder in His Own Show at the Gayety. (Second week.) If you never laughed before, you'll laugh at this.

* * *

Fred Stone in "Criss Cross" at the Colonial. (Sixth week.) Cleaner than most musical shows—also better.

* * *

"Pickwick" at the Majestic. (Fifth week.) In which all of Mr. Pickwick's troubles are aired with much unction. The last week.

"The Pirates of Penzance" and "Iolanthe" at the Plymouth. (Fifth week.) Honestly, this is the entertainment you really can enjoy.

* * *

"Yes, Yes, Yvette" at the Wilbur. (Fifth week.) Bernard Granville joins the cast to add new fun and some fancy dancing.

* * *

"Night Hawk" at the Park. (Third week.) The transgressions of a sinner are given a new and peculiar twist.

* * *

"The Ghost Train" at the Copley. (Twenty-first week.) Upon Mr. Clive's own word this is positively the very last week.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

West's double of the Club is a normal informatory double. North's bid, directly over the double, shows a particularly strong Spade suit; but South, with the singleton Deuce, denies twice, once with No Trump and again with three Clubs, desiring the opening lead to come up to him rather than through him to West's declared high cards. West's holding looks to him as good for two Spade tricks, two Hearts and a Diamond, and the business double is made in spite of the fact that if North makes his contract he will go game.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 8. North has lost two Hearts and one Diamond and must lose at least one Spade. The bidding and play clearly mark West with K-10-9 of Spades, and if North has to lead Spades twice, two of West's Spades must make. To provide against this, Declarer shortens his own trumps by playing the grand coup, trumping Dummy's good Ace of Clubs rather than take the discard.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

LINDBERGH PLANE CRASHES ON EVE OF PARIS HOP

er is president. It was understood to exceed $100,000.

The name of the pilot to accompany Commander Byrd and Lieut. G. O. Noville on the ocean hop was not announced, but Bert Acosta was believed to have been selected.

Acosta, who with Clarence D. Chamberlin made a world's endurance record by remaining in the air more than 51 hours in the Bellanca plane, now the "Columbia," was at the controls of the "America" during a test today.

The statement from the new owner of the "America" said she would not be hurried in preparations for the flight from New York to Paris, but would take off "at the right time."

It was said at the hangar of the America Trans-Oceanic Company that plans would go forward rapidly although not so hastily that any detail would be overlooked to insure the safety and success of the flight.

"3-Ply Race" Looms

But a tri-cornered race to Paris still loomed as a possibility as adverse weather conditions caused further postponement in the take-off of the two foremost contenders.

The Weather Bureau's dictum that a "squally condition" existed beyond mid-ocean caused Chamberlin and Bertaud to postpone their flight set for early today, and meanwhile Commander Byrd is expected to complete his plans for a hop-off.

Byrd, with a bandaged arm, carried since the Fokker monoplane "America" crashed in a test flight a month ago, had not been expected to hop off for several days at least.

Today, however, the sling was to be removed from his injured limb.

Lindbergh, the 25-year-old debonair flier from the Missouri National Guard, however, may do the unexpected if his plane is not too seriously damaged.

Despite the friendly rivalry of the three groups, the spirit of sportsmanship rules them.

Grover Whalen, representative of Rodman Wanamaker, chief of Byrd's backers, has offered both Lindbergh and Chamberlin use of the carefully graded two-mile runway of Roosevelt Field, a short distance from Curtiss Field, for their take-offs. Chamberlin and Bertaud proffered the young Missourian weather maps and a radio and Byrd gave him use of his charts.

Navy to Guard Fliers

The Ryan and Bellanca planes received assurance of aid from the Shipping Board and coast guard yesterday.

All Shipping Board vessels will be asked to report news of the flight immediately. Three coast guard sea planes at Gloucester, Mass., have been asked to escort the two planes out of American territory. The coast guard cutter Modoc will lay down a smoke screen as a guide for the fliers about 1,500 miles off New York.

The "America," which is expected to weigh three times as much as each of the other two planes, was taken up by Lieutenant Bernt Balchen and Daniel Kline, who said it performed perfectly.

Byrd watched with great interest the functioning of the dump valve, permitting gas to be drained in case of a forced landing.

The Bellanca was flown twice by Chamberlin. The radio generator, which the aviators had detached before Nungesser and Coli disappeared over the Atlantic without a radio transmitter, has been replaced on the plane.

Byrd Wires Dorchester Man for Signal Kites

An urgent telegram asking for three radio kites for use on the Paris flight was received today by Samuel F. Perkins, No. 14 Rockland avenue, Dorchester, from Commander Byrd.

These kites, which Perkins will ship some time tomorrow, will be sent up by Byrd in case he is forced down on the broad Atlantic, and they will not only carry up a radio antenna for sending and receiving messages, but will also be used to fly signal flags of distress high over the water.

The Dorchester man has made a lifelong study of the scientific uses of kites and has a government contract to supply them to the Navy for use with scout planes. He believes that had the French airmen carried such equipment they would have been saved.

British Airmen to Try 4,000-Mile Non-Stop Flight

Cranwell, Lincolnshire, England, May 14 (A.P.).—A 4,000-mile non-stop flight, the most ambitious in the history of British aviation, is scheduled to start tomorrow with its objective Calcutta, India.

Lieutenant C. R. Carr and Flight Lieutenant L. E. Gillmon of the Royal Air force will pilot a Hawker-Horsley bombing plane on the flight which, if successful, will smash the present non-stop flight record of 3,415 miles, made between Paris and Djask, Persia, last October.

The plane will be equipped with radio and will carry 1,100 gallons of gasoline. Lieutenant Carr expects to complete the flight within forty-eight hours.

'PLANE IS MY ONLY GIRL,' SAYS SHY LINDBERGH

New York, May 14 (A.P.)—"Lucky" Lindbergh's only love is his monoplane.

The twenty-five-year-old contender in the trans-Atlantic hop today made clear that there is no womanly consideration—aside from that of his mother in Detroit—in his impending lone jump to Paris.

Feminine admirers surround the big, blonde, blue-eyed youth whenever he appears at Curtiss Field to tinker with his plane, the "Spirit of St. Louis," and have observed with some dismay that the daring airman apparently is "girl shy."

"Isn't he the best-looking thing?" one little miss suggested. "Look at those eyes! I love hair like that. Bet he's married!"

The dapper captain gripped his wrench harder and the tightened nut screeched on its bolt.

A girl reporter, acting in the line of duty, put to him the question that seemed to be worrying her sisterhood.

"My airplane is my only girl. Don't know any others. I'm not engaged, married or divorced," came back the answer.

He did, however, hesitatingly accept a mirror from the vanity case of a newspaper photographer's wife to adjust over his compass.

One girl admirer who brought her lunch with her and sat perched on a box, munching a sandwich and rolling limpid eyes toward the youthful aviator, is said to have received nary a glance.

Lindbergh Eats in "Shirt Sleeves" at Hotel Table

Garden City, N. Y., May 14 (A.P.). A tall youngster with a wind-bruised face eats his meals with his coat off in a Garden City hotel where dinner coats are not so rare that they attract attention. He eats in his shirt sleeves because he has no coat with him.

The coatless youth is Charles A. Lindbergh, who proposes to fly from New York to Paris, and he is traveling without baggage to keep down the load of a plane that must carry enough gasoline to keep him up over the long stretches of the Atlantic Ocean.

Being dressed for the part gives Lindbergh another advantage. If he decided to hop off in a hurry he does not have to wait to change his clothes. He can don his fur-trimmed flying suit, "step on it," and be gone.

Three Dead in Suicide Pact

San Francisco, May 14 (A.P.)—Despondency, brought on by poverty linked with religious fanaticism caused three men to take their lives here this week in a suicide pact. The bodies of two of the men were found in one room, while the third died alone.

French President Thanks Coolidge for Sympathy

Paris, May 14 (A.P.).—President Doumergue has cabled President Coolidge expressing deepest appreciation, both on his own behalf and that of the French people, for Mr. Coolidge's message of sympathy over the disappearance of the transatlantic fliers, Nungesser and Coli.

The French people, M. Doumergue said, were deeply touched by the American admiration for the heroic attempt of Nungesser and Coli, and America's whole-hearted aid in the search for them.

WHITE PLANE IS SEEN BY 3 IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Harbor Grace, N. F., May 14 (A.P.). A woman resident of Harbor Grace and two men in Bear Cove, near here, reported today that last Monday they saw an airplane passing over. The men said it was painted white.

The woman, Mrs. Alice Kelly, who is elderly, said that it was about 10 o'clock Monday morning when she saw the plane.

The men, Eben Peddle and his son, asserted that they saw the plane at about the same time. It was going northwest, they added, and they watched it until it passed from sight.

Bear Cove is a small fishing village east of Harbor Grace. Peddle and his son came into this town today for the first time this week and related their story.

Earlier in the week several residents of Harbor Grace reported that they had heard the sound of an airplane engine between 9 and 10 Monday morning, but that on account of the dense fog they were unable to see the plane. This led to the theory that the plane might have been that of the missing airmen, Captains Nungesser and Coli. No other plane was known to have been in this vicinity at the time.

Los Angeles Will Not Go to Labrador

Washington, May 14 (A.P.).—The proposal to send the airship Los Angeles to Labrador in search of the missing French aviators has been abandoned by the Navy Department.

The naval secretary said a flight of the Los Angeles to Labrador had been found to be impracticable because of the diminishing supply of helium and the distance, from 2,400 to 2,800 miles, which the dirigible would have to travel.

This was regarded as slightly in excess of her probable cruising radius under the conditions which would b emet during such a flight.

Information that the navy and Coast Guard search had suspended operations around Nova Scotia was received at the Navy Department today from Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the Boston Navy Yard.

Navy Tugs Returning Here to Guard U. S. Ocean Fliers

The Navy tugs, Wandank and Mohave, which have been searching the seas for traces of the lost French fliers, will return to the Charlestown Navy Yard to prepare for emergency in the American fliers' attempt to reach Paris. The tugs were ordered back to port to refuel and provision. They are scheduled to take part in the Army-Navy manoeuvers in Narragansett Bay next week.

Admiral Andrews has been informed that the tugs have run into heavy fob almost continually since they left here to search for Nungesser and Coli.

Powerful Engine Hum Heard by Woodsmen in Nova Scotia

Halifax, N. C., May 14 (I.N.S.).—A report was received here today from a lumber camp in Mount Uniacke district that the sound of a powerful engine was heard over the camp about 10:40 o'clock Monday night. Parties searching for the lost aviators took cognizance of the report. According to the lumbermen, the noise of the engine ended abruptly as though it had "gone dead."

PINEDO HOPS OFF FROM NEW ORLEANS TO ST. LOUIS

New Orleans, May 14 (A.P.).—Commander Francesco De Pinedo, Italian aviator, hopped off here today, resuming his four-continent flight. It was understood he would stop at Memphis, but later reports from St. Louis said he would go directly there. From St. Louis Commander De Pinedo expects to go to Chicago and thence to Montreal and Newfoundland, where he will take off for his flight across the Atlantic.

MOTHER FLIES TO WATCH 'SKY FIEND' HOP

Curtiss Field, N. Y., May 14 (A.P.). —A flying mother of a flying son came today to see her boy before he starts on an air line for Paris.

Mrs. Evangeline L. Lindbergh, who has twice flown from St. Louis to Chicago with him on his mail route, arrived from Detroit after a trip to St. Louis, where she found Charles gone when she got there.

Mrs. Lindbergh, member of the faculty of a Detroit school, standing beside her son does not reach his broad shoulders. She was confident, she said, he will make a successful flight to Paris and did not oppose his decision to enter aviation as a life work.

"Was he a good boy?" she was asked.

Surprised, Mrs. Lindbergh replied with a question. "Do you need to ask?"

That Charles "brought himself up," was her reply to questions as to his early training.

Mrs. Lindbergh is very proud of her flying son. She likes to fly only with him, she said.

If His Plane Goes Bad, Lindbergh Just Jumps

Chicago, May 14 (A.P.).—Caught in an impenetrable fog which obscured the lights of the Maywood air mail field here and with twenty minutes' gas supply, an air mail pilot eight months ago headed for open country, climbed a mile in the air and then calmly stepped out of his ship for a parachute drop of 5,000 feet, not knowing where he might land.

That pilot was Charles A. Lindbergh, dare-devil aviator now waiting for a propitious moment to hop off for Paris from New York. In his parachute drop here he landed in a corn field. Lindbergh sought and found the wrecked plane, arranged to have its mail cargo taken aboard a train and then called it a night.

Six weeks later he had a similar experience—also at night—and again he stepped out of his ship to make a successful parachute jump while his plane was wrecked.

It was his fourth emergency leap from a disabled ship, making him the only "four-star" member of the Caterpillar Club, composed of aviators who have taken successful forced leaps. Of the four, his two night jumps within six weeks while in the Air Mail Service, probably were the most spectacular.

He encountered a fog bringing the mail from St. Louis to Chicago, and when he arrived found that he was unable to see the landing field signal lights. His gas supply was rapidly diminishing, and after cruising over the city for some time, he headed for what he believed to be open country, set off a final flare and when it showed only fog, climbed to a safe height for a leap, then stepped overboard as his engine sputtered and died. Ship and pilot fell almost together at the start and Lindbergh heard the swish of the wings as the plane twisted in narrow spirals near him.

This jump was made September 15, and on the night of November 5 he made a similar jump under almost similar circumstances from a height of 13,000 feet, landing near the town of Danvers, near Bloomington, Ill.

ANNA EVA FAY'S SHROUD GOWN SHE MADE

Anna Eva Fay, world famous mystic, who was feted by crowned heads of Europe and whose name was a by-word with theatregoers as a result of her feats of magic and mind reading, will be buried tomorrow in Melrose in the costume she wore on her last public appearance.

This information was given to the Boston Evening American today by her husband, David H. Pingree, her inseparable companion for 46 years.

"After her last public appearance, in Milwaukee, three years ago," Mr. Pingree told a Boston Evening American reporter, as tears streamed down his cheeks, "my wife told me she wanted to be buried in the costume she wore that last night.

"Today I took it from the cedar chest in which it has reposed and my wife's wish will be gratified. That beautiful costume, of ivory silk and lace, decorated with tiny pink rosebuds, every stitch of which she made with her own hands, will be her burial shroud."

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the family home, No. 1,121 Franklin street.

Columbia's S. O. S. Will Be Silence of Its Radio

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—Silence of its radio will be the S. O. S. signal of the Bellanca monoplane Columbia on its flight to Paris.

An elaborate wireless apparatus will send dashes at one minute intervals. Land stations and ships at sea can follow the course of the plane, always estimating its position from the flashes.

A transmitter with a wind-driven generator, the last located on one of the wings of the plane, have been installed. The transmitter will have a radius of 250 to 500 miles under favorable condition. The aviators will not have to touch the transmitting key through use of an automatic device that will sound the dashes. A control switch will allow message transmission and a receiving apparatus will allow the fliers to hear from ships and land stations.

A 1,000-foot aerial, dropped to a length consistent with the desired range, will dangle from the plane during its flight.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

RUNYON Says—

MR. LEVETT, the Human Dynamo, of Los Angeles, advises me that he is going ahead with his plans for a transcontinental gallop without reference to Mr. C. C. Pyle's recent announcement about promoting a race of that nature.

In fact, I gather from what Mr. Levett says that he thinks Mr. Pyle is infringing upon his copyright in this trans-continental business; in short, that Mr. Pyle has pilfered his idea. This charge, I am sure, will mortify Mr. Pyle, though it may not dissuade him from his scheme.

Damon Runyon

Of course, if Mr. Levett, the Human Dynamo, proves that it is possible for a man to trot across the continent, it may take some edge off Mr. Pyle's race, but not a great deal, at that. You see, Mr. Levett is running against nothing more exciting than time and his own shadow, whereas Mr. Pyle plans to have several hundred gents running against each other, and, incidentally, running for Mr. Pyle.

Pyle's Interest in Cash Alone

Mr. Levett seems to think that Mr. Pyle is talking of a transcontinental race just for publicity's sake, but I must say I never knew Mr. Pyle to seek publicity unless he expected to change it in for what we call the old do-re-mi.

ANYWAY, as I gather from his note, Mr. Levett expects to start his Human Dynamoing very shortly, attended by his truck with the rubbing tables, and witnesses, and whatever else it takes to make a transcontinental race all that it should be.

I confess I am a bit hazy on that point. I never saw a transcontinental foot race before. In fact, I doubt if anyone ever saw one before. I shall view Mr. Levett's efforts with some interest, though I resent statment in a note from Mr. Raymond W. Duke, of No. 165 Broadway, New York, that he sees by the papers that I am contemplating a transcontinental race.

Dr. Seiler Silent on Plans for Race

Mr. Duke writes with reference to Dr. John T. Seiler, "the Flying Yank," my other long-distance correspondent, who has been strangely silent since this transcontinental thing came up. Mr. Duke wishes to know the doctor's address, which is Maryland, but he has my connection with the race all mixed up.

I am merely the agitator in the matter. I do not contemplate promoting the race, nor do I intend taking part in the race—not that I might not do very well in it, at that. I once beat the chief of police of Pueblo, Colorado, across a couple of townships, and I didn't have any too much start on him, either.

THE only other time I was ever connected with a foot race was in the capacity of an innocent bystander. Some gentlemen out of Webb City, Missouri, came to Colorado City one day years ago and held a little foot race in which one of the participats fell down just before the finish, and at a moment when he was leading by a Salt Lake City block.

As he fell he seemed to emit a great deal of blood, and there was much excitement among the spectators. One spectator in particular appeared to be greatly agitated. I subsequently learned that this spectator had wagered a mere matter of $60,000 on the foot racer who fell down and erupted the gore.

$60,000 Race Not Strictly on Level

I was young and innocent then, and everything seemed to me to be O. K. Coakley, and on the up-and up, and quite Jake. But presently there came limbs of the law making a vast to-do. It seemed that the runner who fell down had a capsule of beef blood between his teeth and bit into it to produce the effect of what he produced.

And to my great astonishment I learned that all this was contrived to relieve the agitated spectator of his $60,000 and that the gentlemen who did the relieving were members of an organization known as the Maybray Mob and that the stricken runner was, in truth and in fact, but an instrument of their skullduggery.

WELL, some of the gentlemen went to the big house, which is a way of saying the penitentiary, and there was a lot of gossip and scandal, and since that day I have never had much confidence in foot races.

Not that I think anything like this could possibly happen in connection with a trans-continental foot race. To begin with, I doubt if there will be anyone interested in the race who will have $60,000. If there is, Mr. Pyle, for one, will probably try to think of some more simple method of getting it than a foot race across the continent.

But in any event, Mr. Levett says he will soon be on his way, and there is this to be said for his favorite pastime: It will keep him out in the air.

LAWRENCE HIGH SCHOOLBOY BREAKS RECORD

Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, Mass., May 14.—Aurel Tremblay of Lawrence High School was the first competitor to shatter a record in the Harvard Scholastic meet at the Harvard Stadium today.

Tremblay tossed the 12-pound shot put 48 feet, to better the old mark by two inches. The former record was held by the son of former President Cleveland.

A strong East wind helped the runners in the dashes, but none of the finalists in the sprint events came near the established records.

Nate Millard of Clark School won the century in 10 1-5, a fifth of a second behind the former mark.

George Voight Wins Another Tourney

LONG BRANCH, May 14.—Well, hear I am, an' it looks like I finally step into somethin' soft. They tell this guy Maloney ain't so fast as Sharkey, but it's all wrong. Soon as I gets here, the guys on the stashun platform gang around an' I think Ime getting the bum's rush again, but I finds Ime a hero wich is so strange that nacherully when they seys would you like a shot I seys yes, an' Ime hear to tell you this town ain't never heard of prohibishun, or if it did it was deef at the moment.

"You mite as well get feelin' rite," the boys tell me. "When this Maloney slaps you a few you won't be feelin'" at wich I laugh merrily, havin' hadm three or four, an' not being unaware of that feelin' enyhow.

"He's a game guy, at that," seys the bird settin' 'em up. "It would take a brave guy to wear that face, but at that he mite have tried hi-jackin'. Name your poison, buddy," which I did.

Finally, they takes me down to where this Maloney is trainin', an' I meets Dan Carroll, a big bird wich looks like he mite be a Brooklyn aldermun.

"Where did you blow frum," he asks me, "an' what of it?"

With wich plesant introdushun, I tells him I been at Sharkey's joint, an' diddent like it.

"If it was too tuff for you their," he pipes, "you won't stick hear till evenin'. But we gotta have choppin' blox an' a sharp ax don't giva dam how rotten the would is."

So he brings out this Maloney, what is a husky palooka at that, an' much more serius lookin' than Sharkey, who can't keep from laughin' all the time, thinkin' of the munney he used to get steam fittin'.

I think this Maloney is a better guy, at that. He takes one look at me, an' he says: "I ain't never seen such a pan, not evun in South Boston. I hates to knock you off, an' not get nuthing for doin' it," he says, "but it's all in fun, an' I gotta get myself hard hearted or I will cry when I slap this guy Sharkey."

With the which, he laffs, an' seys to Dan Carroll "Tn' enyhow, if I kick this goofer in the face they won't nobody know the differences. You better give the poor turtul a feed befoar I take him for ride, because he won't want nuthin' but a undertaker afterwards."

With which pleasin' remarks, they heads me toward a joint down town, an' hear again they was plenty of one thing and a other, an' when it comes time to go back to Jim in the jim, har, har, it makes little or even less difference to me what comes off, includin' my head.

This Maloney comes out, an' I says, seein' his clean suit:

"How do you like your New Jersey?"

Honor Tris Speaker In Cleveland Today

Cleveland, May 14 (A. P.)—It's Speaker Day at Dunn Field today.

Tris Speaker, former manager of the Cleveland Indians, returns home as a private in the ranks of the Washington Club.

City Manager W. R. Hopkins has made it a civic event with formal proclamation in which he recalled the time that "Spoke" led the Indians to a World's Championship in 1920, mentioning his fine playing during his eleven years as captain and manager of the tribe and calling upon his thousands of friends to honor him.

The gift decided on for the returning "hero" is a $1,500 chest of silver. Cleveland firemen and policemen will present him with floral tributes. A testimonial dinner will be held Tuesday night.

Helen and Molla Sail for Europe

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—America's two leading women tennis players left this morning for England, where they will enter the British championship tournament at Wimbledon.

While Miss Helen Wills sailed on the Tuscania, Mrs. Molla Mallory, who won the American title last year when Miss Wills was unable to defend it because of illness, embarked unannounced on the Majestic.

Miss Wills, who was accompanied by her mother, carried an "armament" of 20 rackets with which to make her bid abroad. Both she and Mrs. Mallory expect an opportunity for light practice on deck during the voyage.

Local Golfers Face Quietest Week of Year

By BILL GRIMES.

Facing the quietest week of the season, the local golfers, with the exception of the members of the Women's Golf Association district teams and the Boston Four Ball League, will have plenty of opportunities to brush up on their games in the next few days.

There is nothing in the way of open tournaments on the list for the coming week, so the golfers can spend their spare time practicing and watching the outcome of the W. G. A. and Boston Four Ball League matches.

Bill Grimes.

The championship of the Women's Golf Association of Boston team matches will be virtually decided at the Weston Country Club on Monday, when Central and Brae Burn meet.

At the end of the eighth of the ten-match schedule, Brae Burn and Central are tied for first place, each having won seven and lost one match.

As there is but one more match after Monday's, the winner of the Central-Brae Burn set-to at Weston will be practically assured of the championship. Both teams will send their strongest lineups into action and the contest promises to bristle from start to finish, with Central favored to retain the title.

The race in the Boston Four Ball League has tightened up to such an extent that Woodland and The Country Club are tied for first place with Brae Burn only one point away and Charles River trailing two points behind Brae Burn.

The feature match of Tuesday's schedule will be the Brae Burn-Woodland battle at Brae Burn. The Woodlanders have been at the top of the standing since the opening match during which they corraled four points from Commonwealth.

Unless Woodland succeeds in having both Jesse Guilford and Francis Ouimet in the lineup, there is little chance of it being strong enough to carry off the odd point. Brae Burn has a well balanced team and now that Ray Gorton and Arthur Corwin have hit their stride, wi" continue to climb.

The Country Club will be out to put over its third consecutive clean sweep. Wollaston is the only club that has scored on The Country Club this season, the boys from Monclair holding the Clyde Parkers to an even break in the first match, after which The Country Club annexed eight points at the expense of Winchester and Weston.

Dedham Vs. Salem

The strong Dedham A. A. champion independent team of this State will play the Salem team of the New England League next Sunday afternoon at Stone Park, Dedham.

DAN DENIES JIM FEARS GAGNON

Dan Carroll, manager of Jim Maloney, crashes through with a denial that he fired Jack Gagnon, New Bedford heavyweight, because the latter was making the South Boston Dynamiter look bad in training.

In answer to the charges of Sam Price, Gagnon's manager, that Jack was punching Maloney around, Carroll sent the following telegram to Myles McSweeney of the Boston Evening American:

"Maloney K. O.'d Gagnon in first round. Jack has no courage and would not stand up." (Sig.) Dan Carroll.

That is the answer Carroll gives to the Gagnon forces, but Sammy Price is still shouting from the house tops that Jack Gagnon proved too good a fighter to act as sparring partner for Jim Maloney.

Yankee Tennis Stars Beat Belgian Pair

Brussels, Belgium, May 14 (A.P.).—William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, American tennis stars, took the lead in their international matches with the Belgians today by defeating Washer and Botsford in the doubles 7—5, 3—6, 6—4. Yesterday's singles were divided, Tilden winning from Eubank and Hunter losing to Washer.

Tilden, who is rounding into superb form, played the best tennis today he has shown since coming here.

Thoroughbreds Race on Muddy Track in 53d Kentucky Derby

has been seeking a derby candidate since early in the year and offered $50,000 for Fred, Jr., at New Orleans during the winter meet.

By DAMON RUNYON.

Louisville, Ky., May 14.—What we need more than anything else around here to win a few biscuits on the 53d Kentucky Derby today is a good equine channel swimmer—a sort of four-legged George Young, or Trudy Ederle, or Mrs. Corson.

The boys are deep in the mud. I mean to say they are up to their necks in a study of the racing form of the Derby entries as applied to a

You know—or perhaps you don't know—that many a horse that is a blue streak on a dry track gets to staggering around on a muddy track like a man full of the corn whiskey, which is said to be very difficult to obtain in Louisville this year of Our Lord and Wayne B. Wheeler 1927.

RAIN PROMISED.

As to that I cannot say. I mean as to the corn. Of the mud I can speak with greater certainty. There is apt to be more of it than you see in a political campaign. The weather guy utters most pessimistic words about the proposition. He mumbles of rain, and rain means more mud.

The only man I encountered who seemed to be cheerful over the prospect was a fellow from the far Eastern port of New York who had made a neat wager some months ago on Scapa Flow in the Winter book. He was cheerful until he searched himself to show me the ticket when he suddenly remembered that he had torn it up in disgust after Scapa Flow's showing in the Preakness. The last I saw him he was looking for a rope and a rafter.

The boys seem to think that mud will be of assistance to Scapa Flow, which is Walter A. Jefford's Man O'War colt. A horse of that name and ancestry ought to go well in watery going, at that. You know Scapa Flow, from which the colt was named isn't dry land.

The mud isn't going to hurt Bostonian, one of the Harry Payne Whitney's entries, and the winner of the Preakness. In fact, they say Bostonian loves the mud to such an extent that you could give him a bucket of mud any time and he would eat it up thinking it was oats.

It has been some twelve years since Harry Payne Whitney won his only Kentucky Derby—that time with the only filly that ever grabbed the historic race—Regret. As Whitney rushed out on the track wild with joy, to greet the winenr he was handed a telegram that told him of the death on the Lusitania of his pal, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, and that made it an occasion of deep sorrow for the New York millionaire.

He has a strong hand today with Bostonian and Whiskery. Only one horse, as I remember, ever won both the Preakness and the Derby, and that was Sir Barton. Still, Bostonian might do it. Personally, I had my two fish all ready for deposit on Mr. Salmon's Black Panther when the rain came on. They tell me Black Panther can't even walk in the mud.

The hope of what we jocularly call the West, meaning Kentucky, is a steed named Rolled Stocking, a fancy title for a he-horse, it seems to me. Rolled Stocking—and be sure you get it singular and not plural—is owned by J. W. Parrish, and will be chauffeured by W. Pool. They say there is more run in Rolled Stocking than is commonly popular with the gals. Still, Rolled Stocking would seem to be appropriate for the mud, at that.

Derby Facts

Place—Churchill Downs, Louisville.

Time—About 4:40 p. m., central standard time.

Recent winners—Bubbling Over in 1926, Flying Ebony in 1925, Black Gold in 1924 and Zev in 1923.

Classy Games on School Diamond Card

Having dropped a game to Cambridge Latin, Medford High is attempting to get back on its winning way once more when it plays Everett at Everett today.

The Medford-Everett game is not a Suburban League contest. Medford is no longer a member of that organization and is playing through the league season as a guest. The natural rivalry between the two schools insures a hard fought contest, however.

Two Suburban League contests are being played. Cambridge Latin is playing Brookline High at Brookline and Somerville High and Rindge Tech are playing at Russell Field, North Cambridge.

Another game that is attracting interest is being played at Malden, where Malden High is entertaining Boston College High.

Newton High, with McCreary doing the flinging, is playing Brockton High at Brockton.

Golf Notes

Although only three matches have been played in the Boston Four Ball League, there are but six pairs who have participated in all matches still undefeated. The Country Club claims two of these, Rodney Brown and P. W. Whittemore and Bunny Estabrook and Herbert Jaques. The others are Pierce and Freeman of Wollaston, Kerns and Hutchinson of Brae Burn, Grimball and Whitcomb of Belmont Spring and Billy Munsell and G. Wilson MacDow of Oakley.

Miss Francis Cross of the Central District team has a very comfortable lead for individual honors in the second division. Miss Cross has not lost a match this season, in seven contests, and she has run up a total of 56 points.

Just as soon as Walter Falvey of Wollaston receives his State handicap card, he will take his place with the leading golfers in New England. A couple of weeks of strenuous practise will put the former Boston College athlete right at the peak of his game, which will mean trouble for some of the stars. Falvey would put a real punch in that Wollaston four ball team.

Mrs. R. M. Cooms, of the Kernwood Country Club, who plays with the Northern District second team, has won five of her seven matches this season. In the first match of the season, Mrs. Cooms lost to Miss Francis Cross, the outstanding player in the division, 4 and 3, and was two down to Mrs. R. W. Harris of Central in the sixth match.

Miss Martha Brewer of Weston and the Central District team has eliminated herself from the individual honor class of the W. G. A. team match championship. After winning six consecutive matches, Miss Brewer lost to Mrs. Betty Shay of Providence and Mrs. G. P. Hunter of Southern.

There are only four players left in the fight for individual honors. Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., is still out in front with eight straight victories, with Mrs. D. M. Belcher, of Northern, Mrs. S. E. Bentley of Brae Burn and Mrs. W. J. Hainan of Central tied for second place, five points behind Mrs. Baker.

BALL PLAYER WED FOR 20 YEARS IN SECRET

Urbana, O., May 14 (A.P.).—A secret marriage of twenty years' standing was revealed here today following the death of Jimmy Downey, well-known minor league baseball player of a quarter of a century ago.

Downey married Miss Catherine Loucks of Troy, N. Y., in 1907 and though he had lived here for thirteen years, following his retirement from baseball, none of his friends knew he was married.

DEMPSEY LOOKS LIKE "TIGER JACK" OF OLD AS HE FIGHTS AND WRESTLES IN CHARITY SHOW

Jack and Jim Classier Contenders Than Was Tunney, Says Tex

By JACK CONWAY

New York, May 14.—Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney are better fighters right now than Gene Tunney was at the time he was matched to battle Jack Dempsey for the championship, according to a statement made today by Tex Rickard.

"Sharkey and Maloney have both shown real class in the ring," said Rickard. "Sharkey has beaten Wills, Godfrey, Renault and McTigue while Maloney has conquered Delaney, Persson, Diener and [illegible].

Jack Conway

"When I matched Tunney with Dempsey, the former Marine [illegible] as far as [illegible] weight was concerned. I [illegible] $1[illegible] gate with Dempsey.

"At the time I made the Dempsey-Tunney bout the public was demanding that Harry Wills receive a crack at the championship. I [illegible] Wills by telling everybody I thought Tunney was the better fighter. I'd confess I didn't think much of Tunney at the time. But I didn't want a Dempsey-Wills tussle.

It wasn't because Jack didn't want to tackle the negro. Dempsey asked me several times to match him with Wills. I wanted to keep away from the mixed element of the contest in view of my unhappy experience in promoting the Johnson-Jeffries affair. I was chased all over the country with that match before I was able to drop it in at Reno.

"When I decided to give Tunney the Dempsey shot I pulled Gene out of his New York bout with Jack Sharkey. I had the pair booked for a date at Madison Square Garden. I saw Sharkey [illegible] with punches and was afraid he would ruin Tunney. I would have put the bout on if I had thought Sharkey could have knocked Tunney out, but I was fearful it would develop into one of those dreary affairs.

DEMPSEY DREW CROWD.

"I believe it was Dempsey's great reputation as a puncher which was responsible for the record house at Philadelphia. Ninety per cent of the crowd which saw the Dempsey-Tunney fight came from the State of Pennsylvania, which proves that New York can't claim a monopoly on staging big bouts.

"I may put the Tunney bout on at Philadelphia this year again. Gene will draw as an opponent Dempsey, Sharkey, Maloney or Paolino.

"I would like to see a knockout when Sharkey and Maloney clash at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night. It's the old wallop which puts the kick into a heavyweight bout. I don't like to see heavyweight matches decided by a decision. Give me the bird who can knock the opposition horizontal. That's why fellows like John L. Sullivan and Dempsey were such cards.

"Sharkey and Maloney are only a couple of kids and have wonderful futures before them. I look for each of them to keep improving for three more years.

"Even if Sharkey and Maloney are both knocked off this year they will be right back in the big money next year again. And for many years to come. Good heavyweights are rare and when a couple of fellows get as highly developed as Sharkey and Maloney they are in line for fame and riches.

"If these kids stick to the boxing racket for five years more each of them will be able to retire as millionaires. And in five years neither Sharkey nor Maloney will be thirty. What an opportunity is offered to a heavyweight!

"The ability to stand prosperity is what will determine the future of the two Boston heavyweights. If these kids can keep their feet on the ground and go [illegible] $[illegible] [illegible] and have a flock of [illegible].

"This is a golden age for all kinds of professional athletes. When I built New Madison Square Garden there were people who said the place was too large. I could have sold out three times for the [illegible] Maloney bout.

"I am glad to see that Boston is going to have a real sporting arena on the spot of the new terminal of the Boston & Maine Railroad. It is planned to construct a sporting arena over the terminal which will be able to seat 18,000 persons. That is the seating capacity of Madison Square Garden.

NEVER PICKS WINNERS.

"Boston has plenty of big sportsmen. I must confess that quite a number of the members of the Madison Square Garden Club, my private organization of 600 millionaires, come from Boston. These men will give their assistance to getting the necessary money for Boston's new sport arena."

When asked to pick the winner of the Sharkey-Maloney bout, Rickard laughingly replied:

"I never pick winners of boxing matches, especially when I am the promoter."

There has not been much betting along Broadway. What few bets have been made have been placed at even money. By the first of next week the big dough will show up.

Railroad Makes Plans to Handle Fight Crowd

Special trains, extra sections and added coaches on regular trains have been scheduled for next Thursday by the New Haven and Albany railroads to carry the hundreds of fight fans to New York for the Sharkey-Maloney fuss.

Reservations for Thursday trains have been piling in on the railroad managements and today it was decided to run extra sections to the two crack trains from Boston. The Knickerbocker, pride of the New Haven road, will run in two sections as will the Flying Yankee, the Albany road's limited.

Two special trains will leave at noon and it is expected they will carry the heaviest of the [illegible] bound traffic. Extra coaches will be run on all New York bound trains during the day.

Jim's Right Eye Gives Mr. Boston the Dope

By Jack Conway

NEW YORK, May 14.—"I just got the low down on Jimmy Malone from the latter's right eye," chirped Mr. Boston as he paraded [illegible] Broadway today arm in arm with Dan Morgan.

"So Dan has told you everything," I said knowingly.

"Not by a jugful," replied [illegible].

"Dan is not the right [illegible] Maloney board of strategy.

"He is the chief of the [illegible].

"Honeyboy Finnegan is the right eye of the Maloney outfit," volunteered Mr. Boston.

"I was just killing a [illegible] ing my jaws at one of those [illegible] when Finnegan breezes in. He pulled in a chair next to me. 'These places which have a swell set up usually have [illegible]' [illegible] the Honeyboy.

"'Did you ever drop in at Antoine's down in the French quarter in New Orleans [illegible]

"'Sure,' I replied.

"'Remember the signs [illegible] walls down there? No music, [illegible] No fancy pictures. JUST FOOD.'

"'JUST FOOD is the knock [illegible]' I [illegible]

"'Did you come all the way [illegible] from Long [illegible] get a couple of hot cakes?' I [illegible]

"'No,' said the Honeyboy. 'I [illegible] get away from [illegible] nonading. I couldn't stand it [illegible]'

"'Is the fleet off Long [illegible]' [illegible]

"'It isn't the fleet,' replied the [illegible] sound of Maloney's knockout sock [illegible] der in his punches.'

THE first images of gods carved out by primitive men everywhere seem to have been feminine deities. Four little clay figurines found in Arizona show that prehistoric American Indians carved feminine fetishes just as did stone age cavemen.

Recipes Asked for by Readers

By MARTHA LEE

UNCLE SAM must think that I am one of his best customers [illegible] has been my mail this last week [illegible] the privilege of helping [illegible] that every homemaker [illegible] you ask, the happier I [illegible] be. And I can't tell you how I appreciate [illegible] problems large and small. Please show that [illegible] more questions.

Some of the recipes recently requested are ones that I believe will have a general appeal, so I'm taking today to share them with all of you.

Mrs. E. P. R. of Arlington asked for a recipe for brownies which she intends to sell at a tea room. I think this one will prove not too expensive to make at a good profit.

Brownies — ½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 squares chocolate, 2 eggs, ½ cup nut meats, ½ cup flour, ⅛ tsp. salt.

Cream butter, add remaining ingredients, spread on buttered sheets and bake ten to fifteen minutes. Cut in squares as soon as taken from oven.

Mrs. N. L. P. of Winthrop writes me that she would like to have a recipe for quick mayonnaise. She says salads are very popular with her family these Spring days, but one needs a recipe for a mayonnaise which will require only a few minutes' preparation.

Quick Mayonnaise — 1 egg yolk, 2 tbsps. vinegar, 2 tbsps. lemon juice, ½ tsp. salt, 1 cup oil, ¼ tsp. pepper, ½ tsp. paprika, ½ tsp. mustard.

All ingredients must be very cold. Fill the lower part of a double boiler with ice water. Place the upper boiler over this, and mix the pepper, paprika and mustard. To this add the beaten egg yolk, mix thoroughly and slowly add the vinegar and the lemon juice.

With an egg beater beat this up and add the oil by the half teaspoonful until three or four tablespoonfuls of it have been added. Continuing the beating with the Dover egg beater, add the remainder of the oil more rapidly, and at the very last add the salt. For fruit salad dilute one half with whipped cream.

I'm sure Mrs. D. [illegible] of New[illegible] who requested this recipe for Spanish omelet, will be the one to appreciate its economy and delicious flavor.

Spanish Omelet—Two eggs, two tablespoons hot water, one [illegible] teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, one tablespoon butter.

Melt the butter in the frying pan, add well-beaten eggs to which seasonings and hot water have been added. Cook on cool portion of range, lifting mixture as for scrambled eggs. When creamy, pour into a hot buttered frying pan, brown delicately, fold and serve. Garnish with [illegible] Spanish sauce.

Spanish Sauce—Saute two tablespoons each of chopped onion, green pepper, a clove of garlic, in four tablespoons butter until [illegible], add one cup of tomato seasoned with salt, pepper and cayenne, and cook until thick. One-half cup mushrooms sauted with onions is an improvement.

Mrs. I. N. McD. of Dorchester asks me to come to her rescue with a recipe for chocolate bread pudding. Her husband had some at a friend's house a short time ago and has been asking for it at home ever since. Here we are:

Chocolate Bread Pudding—Three-quarters cup bread crumbs, two cups scalded milk, three squares chocolate melted, three-quarters cup sugar, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla, one-quarter cup cold milk.

Mix all ingredients in the order given. Pour into a buttered baking dish set into a pan of hot water and bake one hour in a moderate oven, stirring twice during the baking to keep chocolate from rising to the top.

And that's all for today, but remember, I'm always glad to hear with special menus or recipes, so don't hesitate to write in early and often.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

LOVE, TO SOME SINGLE MEN IS LIKE A BUBBLE
MOST OF THEM ULTIMATELY BURST!
TO SOME MARRIED MEN LOVE IS LIKE A RAINBOW—
IT TOUCHES HEAVEN—
THEN IT COMES DOWN TO EARTH AGAIN!
© 1927 Premier Syndicate, Inc.

LOVE, to some SINGLE MEN, is like a BUBBLE. They say if a man knows how to use the SOFT SOAP of flattery he can always have Pretty women blowing across his path.

These are FASCINATING while they LAST. But, of course, most of them ultimately VANISH into THIN AIR, for that which is EMPTY soon BURSTS.

To some MARRIED MEN, love is like A RAINBOW. It starts at one Point, touches HEAVEN, then comes down to EARTH again, and finally FADES.

The BUBBLE and the RAINBOW are both Charming ILLUSIONS. But to believe that LOVE is also an ILLUSION is one that We should try to HANG ON to.

Correct Manners

Important Don'ts.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it proper for a boy friend to arrange the next meeting?
2. Is it proper for a girl to telephone a boy friend on purpose to make an engagement?
3. Is it a girl's place to ask a boy friend to go home with her?
4. Should a girl speak first to a boy friend?

V. V.

YES, that is the male's privilege.
2. No! No! No! Nothing would so disgust a boy who has breeding and manners than to have a girl call him for the evident purpose of making an engagement with him.
3. No.

Nungesser's Own War Story

We left Captain Charles Nungesser and his loyal mechanic, Ponchon, high in the air over the German lines, their plane a target for the enemy guns. Read how this intrepid French aviator, in his own story written some time before he began his trans-Atlantic flight, brought his plane safely back to the French lines, in this, the fourth instalment.

By CAPTAIN CHARLES NUNGESSER.

The fight which we were in was too unequal for any man to stand. Our enemies had every advantage, while we were practically helpless. The glare of every shell that burst high above us showed our exact location to the artillerymen. To remain there, and chance a gun bombardment, was sheer madness.

By this time the plane was tossing, plunging, rising and falling from the battering it got. It demanded all my skill to keep it flying, and I gasped:

"We must retreat."

I judged that we were about two thousand feet in the air, and the loss of blood was slowly weakening us.

A sudden sinister crash now came from under the machine and Ponchon and I glared at each other discouraged, for it was not the result of a shot. There was a hopeless expression in my companion's blood-shot eyes, and he started as there sounded a second crash near our landing wheels.

The plane lurched and I tried to keep cool as I straightened her out.

"What is it?" I demanded.

"I see," he answered, bending over the edge of the cockpit and staring into the gloom.

HEAD FOR FRENCH LINES

The machine was still working. That comforted us. I straightened her for the French lines, raised the tail planes, and held her at a high altitude. We were out of the rain of lead for a few minutes now. There were only two chances for us. We must keep out of range of these guns at all costs, so speeding ahead, or we must hide in the clouds.

Just when I imagined we were getting out of the danger zone a shot came up and burst so near that it nearly deafened us. But the plane kept rising with a queer jolting and slipping that I could not understand.

And at intervals that strange bumping sound under the fuselage went on.

Ponchon, nervous and apprehensive, still leaned over the side and he presently caught sight of a dangling object that almost made his heart stop beating, as he afterward told me.

"The left magneto has been shot away from its bracket and is dangling at the end of its wires," he shouted above the roar of the exhaust, and a shiver went through me. "It is swaying close to the propeller. If it hits the blades it will break them!"

FREES MAGNETO

I scowled at this new misfortune, for I knew that if the propeller broke and unbalanced the tail, a crash was inevitable.

When I looked for Ponchon again he had unfastened his belt and disappeared. I twisted my head and saw him stepping out on the lower wing.

The daredevil mechanic had evidently decided that our situation was too critical, and there in the darkness at [illegible] got he had left the cockpit to repair the damage. He had a pair of pliers gripped between his teeth and was moving with deliberate [illegible] not to unbalance the plane.

I saw him grip the wire stays and steady the plane as his weight on the wing began to bend it down. Then he laid on his stomach and crawled forward along the edge of the wing, in the direction of the aileron.

Hanging by one hand from the struts he waited for the swinging magneto to swing toward him, and made a grab, but missed it. The second grab brought the wire into his fingers and he finally cut it with the pliers and dragged the magneto in.

As he crawled back to his seat he was as calm as if this perilous act was of no consequence whatever. But when I reported the matter at headquarters upon our return to our base, we added a more magneto. Ponchon was awarded the Croix de Guerre, and I was advanced to the grade of adjutant.

OFF TO DESTROY GUN

As the war grew more intense [illegible] more [illegible]. The noise, confusion and excitement of [illegible] made madmen of [illegible].

I was given [illegible]. It became [illegible] the enemy [illegible] a large flock of planes spying on us.

One evening an order came from headquarters to find and destroy a hidden gun in a dense wood, and the job was given to me. The gun was doing considerable damage and it was therefore imperative to destroy it.

I left Ponchon at our base, was given a good machine gunner and selected a Voisin plane to which we attached the biggest bomb I ever carried. It was an enormous No. 200 all set and timed. It contained a terrible explosive. The least jolt, the slightest jerk in starting the plane was liable to make it burst and kill us.

You can rest assured that I was very careful to crank the propeller with my own hands. Nor did we feel easy until we were off the ground, when I studied the [illegible] given me on [illegible].

The order explained where I might find the gun.

The woods covered a sort of valley a few miles from our base, and when we reached the place I kept out of range of the enemy's shots, any of which might explode the giant bomb.

It had grown so dark by this time that we could not distinguish anything on the ground, much less see a solitary gun emplacement. For half an hour we kept circling over the forests, peering down in all directions, but despite all our efforts, we failed to see anything of the hidden weapon.

WRECK ENEMY'S DEPOT

I was finally upon the point of giving up in despair when my gunner uttered a startled exclamation, pointed downward, and said he saw a patch of white, looking something like concrete. Our [illegible] after a moment's study that it was the battery we were after. I carefully moved the plane until it was directly over the object, and when positive of my mark, I let the bomb go.

There was a brief interval of silence, then there came the most terrific explosion I have ever heard in all my life. The up-rush of gas and the concussion of the air nearly capsized the plane.

I had great difficulty in preventing the Voisin from rolling over and over, and felt her sucked downward, after the first impact. Our ears roared like drums, our eyes smarted and my cap was carried off my head. As soon as it was over, we naturally imagined it was all caused by our gigantic bomb. But we soon learned our error.

Instead of hitting the gun we found we had [illegible] that we had blown up a German ammunition depot. We afterward learned that it had put the hidden gun out of commission, deprived our enemies of food for their cannon, and frightened their outposts into a frenzied retreat.

There was great joy in our camp when we returned, and made our report.

(To be continued Monday.)

AND ON THE 3,600-mile, non-stop flight across the ocean he will go alone in his slim gray monoplane, named "The Spirit of St. Louis." He sits in a tiny compartment, with wings and fuel tanks so arranged that it is impossible for him to look ahead. To see before him he must use a periscope, like the captain of a submarine. On either side little windows let him look down. He steers by compass.

THIS YOUNG American boy's plan to cross the ocean in a monoplane with only fifty-three feet wing spread, without a sextant, without any companion to allow him a few hours' sleep or cheer him on the journey, is something altogether extraordinary.

If this effort of extraordinary courage is successful, you may be sure that Lindbergh will be welcomed in France and wherever courage is understood.

MR. JUDD GRAY, who confesses that he helped Mrs. Snyder murder her husband, is an optimist. He says:

"Mrs. Snyder got me into this jam, and I don't want ever to see her again, except in Heaven."

CHICAGO invented the skyscraper, means to keep ahead, and now plans a fifty-million-dollar building, according to the Herald Examiner. That would make the General Motors Building, in Detroit, or Mr. Horowitz's Equitable Building, in New York, look small.

Chicago's building will contain an auditorium, seating 75,000, a 4,300-room hotel, a convention hall with 300,000 square feet of space, garage room for 1,500 automobiles, an athletic field for pageants, etc., and a quarter-mile cinder track. That sounds like a real building. It will be forty stories high, and twins.

TO ANSWER the scientific question, "What sort of milk do young lions drink?" Captain Schneider, head-keeper of Berlin's zoo, recently milked a lioness at great risk to himself.

Professor Zernzioss wanted to make experiments.

He will find that lions' milk is much like other milk, so much sugar, so much fat, so much protein, etc.

When a lion is killed the African chief eats its heart, thinking it will make him lion-like, but it doesn't. "Tiger, tiger, burning bright," and the lion burning similarly, get their fearful powers from heredity, the mystery of life, not from milk.

MESSRS. SLOAN, president, and Dupont of General Motors made a polite bow to their stockholders on Thursday, handing them an extra cash dividend of $[illegible], raising General Motors dividend from $3 to 10 per cent, at least for this quarter.

IF YOU HAVE General Motors or any other good American stock, hold it. There is no knowing what American things may be worth, but beware how you gamble, ESPECIALLY in automobile stocks.

General Motors is powerful, built on a rock of common sense, gigantic resources and diversified products. But in the distance there is a cloud the size of Henry Ford's hand. There is an automobile fight coming, in advertising and in price. It will make a battle of dinosaurs look like a Maltese kitten frolic.

AMERICANS are taught to revere the law of supply and demand. Labor and living cost must obey that supreme law.

But Mussolini says "I AM THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND." He orders wages cut 10 per cent, all over Italy, and orders prices of food and other necessaries reduced, to meet the wage cut.

There is something of Napoleon in Mussolini. When told that everything depends on circumstances, Napoleon replied: "Circumstances? I MAKE circumstances."

Shackled Souls

by ELENORE MEHERIN

Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

Roen Ross, at 13, promises her dying father to take care of her mother and small brother. Roen, now 18, goes with Jackie, aged 9, to the Gloucester shore. She meets Michael Scott, who tells her he loves her. She promises to wait five years for him to be educated and is happy in her love for him. Her cousin, Evelyn, recounts her flirtations while Roen waits for Michael to call.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER 6.

"LET'S go for a walk. You won't mind, will you, Aunt Anna?"

"It's too late," broke in Roen hastily. "Besides I'd have to change my dress."

"Take a walk up to the drug store, then. I'll treat to an ice cream. I'm starved."

"You don't have to leave your aunt's house to get food, Evelyn," said Dearie with dignity. "There's full and plenty in the house. Roen has baked her Dutch chocolate cake."

"Let's make coffee, then," said Evvie jumping up and grabbing Roen's arm. When they reached the kitchen, she said brightly. "I'll be back in a minute!" and dashed off to Roen's room.

This was Evelyn's way She would powder and frizz up her hair, finally taking down the whole mass, rats, hairpins, extra puffs and all. Just as the feast was ready she would flit out with an amazed: "Ready! Heavens in that minute! Here, I'll carry in the cups."

So Roen made the coffee alone. She reached down the cake and, turning, met Jackie's ferocious eyes: "Gonna cut that for HER? We didn't make it for Evvie Royce!"

"There's enough," said Roen, cutting it somberly. She set the things in the living room. In a great hurry now. She hoped fervently he wouldn't come—not till her cousin was gone.

With the exalted idealism of 18 Roen guarded her love. If Michael and Evelyn met it would be hurt.

Evelyn had a way of "joshing"—a way that tittered and cheapened. She would raise her eyebrows for instance and say: "Oh, how DO you DO, Mr. Scott! You and Roen met at the shore, you say? Oh, so you're the one that's never kissed or been kissed? Now who'd believe THAT!" Making it appear that Roen had talked of him.

It always made Roen furious.

"Here, have more cake," she now said, rushing a mammoth portion on Evvie's plate before the first piece was finished. And listening with her heart in her ears for steps at the door.

At last Evelyn was leaving. "Don't think I'm as fast as I sound, Ron," she shrugged, drawing on the long gloves and carefully placing the bracelets inside. "After you've had two or three vacations, you won't be so green yourself."

It was after 5. Roen stood on the kitchen porch and looked moodily into the back yard.

Could he have forgotten? So soon—

An image of the men Evvie described—the bronze god—came to her. She shut her eyes against it. She remembered Michael standing on the steps of the train, his lips forming that sweetest of words. "Asthore—goodby Roen Asthore!"

A solemn, momentous, stricken feeling possessed her—a feeling that her life was immutably bound with this brief, consuming experience. If Michael failed her, her heart would die.

Roen Almost Hysterical as She Waits for a Letter

Where was he? Where could he be?

She was aware suddenly of Jackie leaning against the door at her side. He had his arms resolutely folded and stared where she stared.

"Guess he ain't coming, Ron. Thought you said he was. Oh, gee!—wonder if he knew how we expected him!"

She stooped suddenly and flung her arms about Jackie, astonishing him with her almost hysterical, "You angel!"

In the mornings she always left the house with Jackie. They walked together to the school and kept on to her train.

But this Monday she sent him off alone. "I want to fix something special for Dearie's lunch. You mustn't be late...." And she loitered till the last minute because the mail came then. She was certain there would be a letter—a dear, brimming letter. She would tuck it in her blouse and go off to work singing.

There was no letter

She reached the Kilby street insurance office where she worked

As she entered the office, James Burton, manager of her department, greeted her. He liked Roen—an appealing, provocative girl for all her zealous industry. He had even gone so far in his softer moments as to speculate on her possibilities as a wife.

Now, as she came in, a flutter of hair about her temples, she looked like Springtime, thrilling with youth. He admired her trim business outfit—the long plaid skirt, full pleated, the severe tailored waist and the blue reefer jacket.

"Fine girl," thought James Burton. He intended making Roen his private stenographer. He would have a chance to watch her more closely. After a while—well, he might take a radical step. Perhaps it would be a wise choice after all Big men had married their stenographers before Not handsome girls like Roen Ross, either.

Roen sat at her typewriter, one in a row of three girls. She looked out of a window into the street. The sun would be shining in Ithaca. Just about now he would be hurrying from one building to another.

In the light-hearted, immature college throng she saw Michael, his fine, gay profile nobler than any, stronger than any. A man among boys—a man who knew his own heart and came of a steadfast race that loved early and loved long. But always the one girl

"Something happened," she told herself riding home on a crest of buoyant confidence. "He'll come tonight!"

Monday passed and Tuesday. Tuesday night, after her mother slept, Roen came and stood at her open door. Dearie's hand was across her face. She often cried in her sleep. Roen resented this. She had thought, "That's weak." Now she wished to go in and touch her mother's hand. She wished to beg her pardon. Dearie had a right to weep.

Wednesday afternoon she heard Mr. Burton speaking at the phone, "Miss Ross working here—"

Roen's fingers grew taut over the keys. After a pause Mr. Burton put up the receiver.

"There was a party inquiring about you," he told Roen.

"Who?"

"I don't know. As soon as I answered they hung up."

She felt her neck under the high, soft stock flaming and the burning tide creeping up her cheeks. "Was it he? Was the voice Michael's?"

The Red Signal ~ 'Did You Kill?' ~ By Homer Banks

ROGER IS BLAMED—Rosalind's collapse had been complete. The smashing revelation that Helen had confessed to the killing of Samuel Manton pleading self-defense, had crushed the girl. For two days she had been confined to her bed, delirious, while Adelaide had tended her. Roger had called but Adelaide had warned him against seeing Rosalind. "She blames you for allowing Helen to acknowledge killing Manton."

"YOU WILL UNDERSTAND—TOMORROW—" "Her devotion to that woman is something I cannot understand." Roger smiled sadly. For a moment the worn and haggard look on his face vanished. "You'll understand," he said quietly, "when Helen takes the witness stand tomorrow and tells her story. I have been forced to keep everything from Rosalind for reasons which I cannot explain now. Remember this, that Helen is suffering much more than Rosalind. And her story will startle the city."

HELEN FACES ORDEAL—Promised a sensation when Helen Martin took the witness stand to tell of the murder of Samuel Manton, every human being who could possibly squeeze into the courtroom was present Wednesday morning. Roger, realizing that the high point in the trial had been reached, struggled to disguise his own nervousness when he called on Helen in her cell to soothe and give her courage for the ordeal. "I am brave," she said simply. "I promise you I won't break down."

"DID YOU KILL MANTON?"—They led her into the packed courtroom. She entered with a firm step. Her head was raised proudly. There were a few perfunctory questions asked after she ascended the witness stand. The answers were given in a cool, clear voice. To the tense spectators the preliminaries seemed to drag on for hours Suddenly there was a hush as Roger Hope arose and faced Helen Martin. Fixing his eyes on the [illegible] woman, he asked: "Did you kill Samuel Manton?" (Continued Monday)

'Forbidden Lips'; Jacqueline Tells Tom Ware That She Loves Him

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER 35

As long as she was in the taxicab, as long as she was climbing the stairs up to her own little apartment, Jacqueline's spirits maintained themselves at a high, artificial level of excitement.

She opened the door and stepped into the cozy warmth of her little home. A small gilt clock was ticking cheerfully, and she saw that the hour was only 2 o'clock. A sensation of utter impossibility had swept over her. She had lived more since before dinner than most women experienced in a life time!

For a minute she stood just inside the door after she had closed and locked it . . . was conscious that she was breathing heavily as though she had been running . . . escaping from some terrifying pursuit. The cloak she had been wearing slipped from her shoulders and fell, heedlessly, on the floor. She saw it crumpled up at her feet but, strangely, she had no impulse to pick it up . . . strange she should feel so [illegible]

She pressed the light switch beside the door and flooded the place with soft illumination

Over a narrow table, against the wall, was a mirror, and she moved [illegible] it, stood [illegible] self [illegible] her reflection was [illegible] about the eyes [illegible] some vague terror [illegible] made a part of her expression. With an effort of the will, she [illegible] lips into a smile . . . [illegible] remained staring.

"I'm not right," she told herself aloud "My nerves oughtn't to be crawling this way [illegible] hold of myself . . . got [illegible] of it . . ."

She began moving [illegible] the room went into the [illegible] turned on the light there

For no adequate reason she picked up the ivory-backed buffer and began, absurdly, to brush her nails. But this, she told herself, was abnormal . . . queer

[illegible] on her dress [illegible] table and picked up a long [illegible] with a heavy [illegible] hand [illegible]

[illegible] recently held in her hand [illegible]

Her voice was a harsh, unnat[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] was in front of the mirror [illegible] those startled eyes!

There . . . reflected . . . she saw out round, white arm lifted [illegible]

Somehow after a seething passage of time, she had Tom Ware on the telephone.

[illegible] Tom! For God's sake [illegible] I need [illegible] Tom! I'm [illegible]

[illegible] and pleading. [illegible]

[illegible] the clatter of [illegible]

[illegible] trifle, Tom Ware, with his sinewy strength picked her up in his arms and carried her to the deep com[illegible] the wall, where he disposed her like a tired child and sat down beside her. With neither of them was there any immediate desire or necessity of caresses.

"You're too fine to work in a [illegible] like the Sea Shell," he told [illegible] "I hate the whole [illegible] dear."

"I stood [illegible] as long as I could, Tom and then it grew hideous [illegible] I got frightened . . . I was afraid that I might sink in the quicksands myself . . ." she clung to one of his hands. "I [illegible] have to be like that, does [illegible] I just wanted to be happy [illegible] the thing I thought I was [illegible] singing— [illegible] I didn't [illegible]"

"[illegible] love me, don't you, Jacqueline? Tell me you do!"

"With all my heart I do, Tom."

Infatuation An Inadequate Basis

By Beatrice Fairfax,

An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

"DO I really love him?" Thousands of girls are asking themselves this question with sweet perplexity, or else with joy that doubts itself because it seems too good to be true.

In other cases girls may feel a force of almost irresistible magnetic attraction and with good reason may ask themselves: "Is this really love—do I love him?"

At eighteen, Betty suddenly realized that Jack, whom she had chummed with for a year or two, meant everything in the world to her. One June night when Jack took her home from the movies the realization flashed across her mind of a sudden, as they lingered in the moonlight on the steps of her rose-bordered veranda.

Fragrance of roses—magic moonlight Jack's good-night kiss—all confused together in Betty's memory. She was in love.

Yet when Jack asked her to be his wife, on another rose-drenched night, not long afterward, Betty murmured what girls have doubtless been murmuring since Father Adam proposed to Mother Eve:

"But, dear, it's so sudden—you'll give me time to think it over and decide?"

Now Jack's proposal was anything but sudden. It had been obvious for a long time that he was in love with Betty. She had felt the proposal coming

But Betty wanted to play for time so she could think things over a little more and decide beyond a doubt that she really loved Jack. It's hard to think when your heart is fluttering with happiness.

If love were a matter of mere physical infatuation, undoubtedly many persons would be in love with each other.

"Love," says the dictionary, "is an attachment between a man and woman in the highest sense, leading normally to happy marriage." Ask yourself whether the attachment between yourself and the man who interests you is of the highest type and will logically lead you to lastingly happy, successful marriage. That is the true test of whether you love him.

Atomic Life on the Sun

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

I ONCE heard Henry Ward Beecher preach a wonderful sermon on the sun as a symbol of the unrestricted outpouring of divine influence upon all creatures. The great pulpit orator was at his best with such a [illegible], and his imagination drew an overwhelming picture of the marvellous prodigality of the mighty orb, in the endless flood of whose spreading rays the earth and all the planets were but specks of dust.

At that time science supposed that the radiant energy of the sun was maintained by [illegible] through the gradual [illegible] of its gaseous globe by the [illegible] gravitational pressure of so enormous a mass. It was predicted that in a few million years—Simon New[illegible] temperature would fall, and thereupon its end as a giver of light and heat would be at hand.

Inasmuch as only about one two-thousand-millionth of the sun's radiation hits the earth, and less than one hundred-millionth is stopped by all the planets of the solar system taken together, it has always been [illegible] that miss the earth and touch no other planet whatever.

Being unwilling to admit that man's importance can be measured in any sense by so minute a fraction as one two-thousand-millionth, some persons have preferred to assume that the sun emits no radiation ex[illegible] conception, based upon the narrow limitations of our knowledge, the solar rays which miss the planets and go on to [illegible] "wasted" than those that stop to keep life astir on the earth.

But the recent discoveries about the complex constitution of atoms have resulted in a complete overthrow of former [illegible] ANNIHILATION [illegible] STANCE OF THE SUN IT[illegible]. We may say that they represent solar matter transformed into radiant energy.

So what has only been [illegible] of as a possibility on the earth, has apparently been realized in [illegible] different condition of [illegible] ing in the sun, and the atoms are there continually transformed into a form of energy which is [illegible] ously radiated away from the sun at the rate of a 100,000-horsepower for every square yard of the sun's surface.

Jeans calculates that the transformation of the sun's mass into energy takes place at the rate of 4,000,000 tons per second. He also shows that this transformation may [illegible] gone on for [illegible] years [illegible] using up more than 1 per cent of the sun's total mass.

The sun has reduced itself to the condition of a "dwarf star." About [illegible] years ago it was a "giant" of the "M" class. Its present dwarf condition is not due only to its loss of matter by transformation into radiant energy, but also to its contraction from an exceed[illegible] state.

In the future it will continue to lose in mass and luminosity until it disappears.

Undernourished Child a Study

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,

WITH all our recent acquisitions of knowledge about diet, the management of the undernourished child is still a problem. Two things are apt to be forgotten:

First, that the size of the individual is not an infallible index of his health.

Second, that physical development is not determined by the amount of food ingested, however rich it may be in its essential constituents.

Day workers fail in managing these children because they try to make all children conform to a weight and height standard.

Tables based on this standard fail seriously in selecting the undernourished.

Dublin Gebhart and other investigators have shown that anything from two-fifths to three-fourths of children who conform to the generally accepted standards are actually defective on careful physical examination.

Their results may also mean that the gain in weight shown after high calory feeding is not in itself conclusive evidence of improvement. Hereditary factors ought to be taken into account.

The desire to make all children conform to standard has produced a method of management based upon wrong principles.

So many people assume that undernourishment is always primarily due to underfeeding, and that a sufficient quantity of food essentials can prevent and remedy the defect.

Block's studies on the children of Norway during the war, especially those whose eyes showed evidence of food deficiency, demonstrated that a deficiency of vitamin "A" alone was not sufficient explanation. By injecting codliver oil he was able to cure conditions which resisted the administration of the oil by the mouth and he concluded that not only a deficiency in the necessary constituent, but an inability to digest it may be at the root of the trouble.

So much stress has been laid upon food values and vitamin requirements that people have relied on forced feeding and neglected the ability or disability of the digestive tracts in performing the work of conversion and assimilation.

They forget that the body is a furnace and that unburnable fuel will not produce heat and power

What Is Your Ideal in Life?

By LUCY LOWELL

HE'S been reading Schopenhauer and some of the other old glooms, who did all they could to make everybody unhappy.

And now he sits around glowering, positively wallowing in wretchedness. He tells you that life is all misery at all times; a long, gray road of misery punctuated only by sign posts of disappointment.

And what the dickens is the use of setting up an ideal and going on working it when you're sure to be disappointed when you hold it in your hands?

And it's all very sad, for he's only a kid. And very useless.

No one, of course, ever holds in his hands his ideal. The ideal is the star which lights the way; you work toward it, but never quite attain it. For if it be a true ideal it always keeps moving just a bit ahead so you must keep on working.

That is what counts, you see—your working.

It is this trying which brings to you experience and education and breadth and depth of character. And if the pursuit of your ideal does do this for you, then you may know that it is a false light you are following and the sooner you forsake it the better.

It is a waste of time for you to sit back and ask what's the use of it all. There is something in average, normal human nature which forces one toward achievement as the sparks fly upward. To remain still is to retrogress; you have to go on!

And if you go cynically and objecting—taking the dark philosophy of such a pessimist as Schopenhauer for your guide—you are bound to miss the greatest thing life has to give, the happiness of trying.

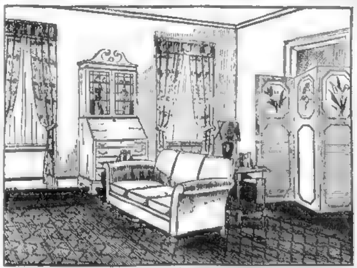
Furnishing the Home



By MARIAN MOORE

THE picture herewith represents a living room on the north side of a house. The reader will picture the gold or butter-color walls, and the crisp cretonne draperies in which a sparkling pattern of blue, rose, yellow and orchid is splashed upon a cream-colored background. Also sash curtains of gold gauze or voile to further warm the light.

Let me suggest colors for other objects in the room by way of helping to establish blue and gold as chief factors in the color scheme. Lamp base, blue pottery; shade, gold with blue bandings; valance, blue with gold edgings; screen, old blue with gold panels; decorations in the colors of the draperies. Add a blue pillow for the couch, and many books in the secretary and on the table in blue, red, black and yellow bindings, and the room will be colorful and livable.

Fifty years ago there were few occupations for women. Some taught [illegible], some did [illegible] work, some [illegible] work to lo[illegible] and a few [illegible] nursing. [illegible] there are very few occupations not open to women. Today they work in great factories with hundreds of other women and girls. There are [illegible] ects, lawyers, dentists, executives, and legislators. But all too often a woman wins her economic independence at the cost of her health.

If Imitation Is Flattery, then the humble calf should feel greatly complimented by the way in which its characteristic markings are being copied to spot other leathers. Especially smart for trimming is white kid, spotted like calfskin in the costume's color.

Influence of Women's Smoking is reflected in the fashions. An imported grossgrain for hat hands has a light tan ground upon which are woven white gold-tipped cigarettes with a touch of black to represent the charred end.

Pickwick Papers ∾ ∾ By Charles Dickens

MRS. BARDELL had been imprisoned by her lawyers because she had no money for her share of the costs in the breach of promise suit. But the magnanimous Pickwick paid the costs so she could be released. Then he and Sam Weller were also permitted to go free.

MR. PICKWICK found that during his imprisonment the love affair of his fellow-Pickwickian, the sporting Mr. Winkle, had progressed rapidly. Winkle had eloped with Arabella Allen, and he returned, leading the lovely Arabella by the hand, to ask Mr. Pickwick's blessing.

SAM WELLER had been interested in Mary, a pretty housemaid, and now they became engaged. Faithful Samuel admitted this to Mr. Pickwick, but declared that even if he married he would always stay by his master "to keep him up and make him comfortable."

THE celebrated Pickwick Club was finally dissolved; Sam Weller married Mary, and the couple lived with Sam's master. So we part company with the ample Pickwick, as he is surrounded by the many friends his noble qualities have gained for him. (The End.)

DAILY SHORT STORY

SHORTY

By William Allen Ward

SHORTY GRIMES was indignant. Despite the fact that Shorty was given the honored name of Charles Raymond by admiring parents at birth, his inability to tower higher than five feet four and one-half inches by the time he had reached twenty-five years gave cow punchers of the Panhandle ranch their reason for calling him Shorty!

Like a slap in the face was this nick name to Charlie Grimes. Since a mere lad of seventeen he had ridden the Staked Plains of Texas with the best cow punchers and none had ever seen him ride other than erect in the saddle—yet they called him Shorty.

Grimes was of a brooding disposition. He never resented the nick name by spoken word but he often sulked in the stables where he told his troubles to "Baby" his cow-pony.

It was the evening before pay-day that Sim Gowins, champion bronch-buster of the Panhandle outfit, made Shorty an outcast for the night by saying, without the least intent of insult; "yore deal Shorty!"

The gang was engaged in a little game of stud when Sim made that statement. A few minutes later Shorty checked in and walked from the bunk house. "Baby" was leisurely engaged in dining on a supper of oats when Shorty entered the stable.

"Baby, ol' boy," said Shorty to his cow-pony and best friend, "I'm just a no-account pole cat of a sheep-herder what's trying to punch cattle—why, Baby, if I had one ounce of red blood in my veins I wouldn't let 'em call me Shorty!"

Poor "Baby!" Cow punchers, since the first steer was trailed over the Staked Plains of Texas, have compelled their ponies to listen to all sorts of tales.

If cow-ponies could talk, many a dark secret of storm-swept desert and box canyon would be solved. For, in the years that have passed, lovesick cow punchers have whispered the stories of their heartaches into the ears of their ponies. And hardened outlaws, too, have crouched in hidden mountain gorges, telling grim secrets of roguery to their horses.

So, when Shorty Grimes spilled the bitterness of his resentment to Baby, no new precedent was being established in the cow country.

"As I was saying," Shorty continued after a pause, "I'm just a dirty coward or I'd knock the block off the very next guy who'd call me Shorty . . ."

The idea seemed to shock Shorty and he stopped his conversation. Such radical defence of his dignity had never occurred to him before. The idea sounded good and Shorty rolled a cigarette in order to be better able to go into the merits of this new method of defence.

Then, after a silence of fully five minutes, Shorty straightened to his full five feet four and one-half inches. He looked his pony straight in the face and made a solemn vow.

"Baby," said Shorty, "tonight I promise and swear to strike square on the nose with my fist the next man, steer or pole-cat that refers to one Charles Raymond Grimes by the nickname of Shorty!"

Baby apparently knew that something of vast importance was taking place. So he nickered in his most friendly manner. Shorty patted him on the flank and departed for his cot.

Scornfully disregarding his partners of the range, Shorty went unobserved to his bunk and soon fell fast asleep. Other punchers followed the zig-zag course of poker, far into the night. Grimes slept like a person who suddenly had lifted a heavy burden from his mind.

With the coming of day he climbed out of his bunk and sped to the stable. It was pay-day and Shorty had planned to leave early for Vinagegroon, ten miles distance, where he intended enjoying some of the privileges that are supposed to accompany a cow boy's month-end. Shorty scorned breakfast for an early start, and soon was well on his way to the town which lay simmering on the sun-baked banks of the Pecos.

"Stick 'em up!" barked Hurricane Smith, outlaw, as he entered the front door of the Bald Eagle Inn. "stick 'em up......Don't start nothin' or I'll get nervous and shoot!"

Gamblers, barkeepers and patrons of the place knew Hurricane Smith to be a stick-up man of reputation. A giant in physical strength, he added to this natural endowment with gun-fanning qualifications that made him feared throughout the vast stretches of the west. So, denizens of the Bald Eagle did not argue when Hurricane Smith ordered them to "hands up." They stood erect like Apache warriors and reached toward the roof.

It was Shorty Grimes' luck to reach Vinagegroon in the midst of the hold-up. He had ridden ten miles and the sand of the Staked Plains was crawling around in his throat, creating an overwhelming desire to stand before a bar and drink long and deep of frothy beverage. He headed straight for the Bald Eagle bar.

"Stick 'em up!" Shorty heard Hurricane Smith growl, as he sized up the situation and figured a retreat would be in order. So, with cautious step, he started toward the door. Meanwhile, Hurricane Smith, from the corner of his eye, had observed this new arrival.

"Hey, cockroach!" leered Hurricane, "no sneaking out....Line forms to the right. Get in and keep yore hands toward the blue sky!"

Shorty knew the reputation of Hurricane Smith and he figured that the main actor in this hold up affair was no other than that notorious personage.

"Make it snappy," bellowed Hurricane, "you horned frog! Think I've got a day to spend in this small-fry burg! Say, you bow-legged sheepherding cur hound, get in line—quick!"

Shorty wasn't at all sure of his personal safety. He was forced to pass perilously close to the bad man. Only a frail poker table stood between them. Shorty was so nervous he almost stumbled.

"Say, you locoed piece of horseflesh," snapped Hurricane, "what's wrong with you—got the foot and mouth disease?"

But the worst of bad men sometimes grow sympathetic. Even Hurricane Smith had a sort of conscience. He realized that the diminutive cow puncher was sorely perplexed and frightened. So—the border bad man relaxed just a bit and said coaxingly:

"Easy now! take your time. . . . SHORTY!"

There it was "Shorty!

Leaping to the top of the poker table, Grimes cast all fear aside. He was determined to make good the promise made to his pony the night before. And standing on the poker table Shorty drove with bullet speed a smashing right to the outlaw's jaw.

"You'd call me Shorty, would you!" yelled Grimes as the bandit crumbled to the floor in a state of coma. His gun dropped from his hand. The hold-up was over. The sheriff of Alamo County soon appeared on the scene and took the robber into custody.

And in the years that followed Vinagegroon folk would tell the story with a great deal of zest, but they always referred to their conquering hero as Charles Grimes!

"RADIO communication is one of the greatest advances in human affairs."

"Safety at sea is achieved with radio, compass and direction finder. In the air and elsewhere, radio fills a place which was empty before. As an adjunct to other activities radio is of great assistance. It fills a distinct place which no other industry can duplicate. As a means of entertainment and spreading of speeches by public men, millions the nation over can listen simultaneously. And the day is not distant when we shall see the speaker over the radio."

Sharkey-Maloney Broadcast

The Sharkey-Maloney bout, to be held in the Yankee Stadium, New York city, May 19, will be reported blow by blow direct from the ringside through WJZ Network of New York. Major J. Andrew White, veteran sports announcer, has been engaged to give a word-picture of the event to radio fans.

Broadcasting will begin at 9:30 p. m. through WJZ, WBZ-WBZA, KDKA, KYW, WRC and WJR.

There are countless roads on all sides to the grave.—Cicero.

THE SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND.

WHAT chance, ye Damsels of Babylon, hath a weak and susceptible man in the hands of a strong modern woman?

Lo, I beseech thee my Daughter, in the game of love be a Good Sport, and betray not the simple faith of a trusting youth, who confideth himself to thy hands.

Go to, if a man delighteth to think himself a sheik amongst women and a danger to damsels, consider his vanity and wound it not. For, wherefore shalt thou tear the veil from his eyes and rob him of his innocent joy, with brutal truths? Rather, let him live to the end of his days, believing himself a conquering caveman!

When a gentle and creduyous man permitteth thee to sit beside him upon the divan, remember his helplessness, and take no liberties with the smoothing of his top-hair and the adjusting of his cravat, and the patting of his coat-sleeve.

For, peradventure, he hath promised his mother never to KISS a woman, and in his weakness, he may be tempted to forget his vows and to cast caution to the winds, and permit thee to pet him!

Pursue not an unsuspecting and defenceless man with attentions and telephone calls and invitations and valentines and birthday gifts. Nay, give him an even break!

For the bravest and wisest of men trembleth lest he become entangled in a love-affair against his will; and a timed man is powerless before an intrepid damsel with a marrying-complex. He hath no fight IN him!

I charge thee, seek not to beguile a man with glowing pictures of the "sweet domestic life," nor to lure him to the altar with false promises.

For unless thou canst offer him coonskin coats and supply him with monogrammed cigarettes, it is unchivalrous to take a sheltered youth from a good home and condemn him for life to the getting of his own breakfast in a kitchenette apartment.

Deceive not a trusting man with visions of home-cooking and darned socks and regular meals. For many an innocent youth hath relinquished his freedom thinking to acquire a permanent housekeeper and a lifelong cook, and found himself tied to a delicatessen diet, a can-opener, and a bridge-fiend.

I adjure thee, cheat not a man's eyes with bleaches and henna and peroxide. For a gentleman that prefereth blondes, it is a great shock to awaken from love's sweet dream and find himself bound for life to a brunette temperament and "dark roots" beneath golden locks.

Verily, verily, my Daughter, in all things else Man may be invincible. But in the Love-game, he is now and forever the Weaker Sex and entitled to woman's protection! And an honorable girl will not play with a trusting man's heart! Nay, she will give him a SPORTING CHANCE!

SELAH!

FADS AND FASHIONS

"Not Giving a Straw" about fashion may be all very well, but many straws are needed to complete the almost solid embroidery of vari-colored raffia seen upon the large flat envelope purses of daintily colored kid. In dainty pastel tones of leather, these handbags offer a charming novelty for Summer use.

Four Horsepower Luck is the way we might compute the value of the good fortune seemingly assured to the wearer of one of the smartest new gold or silver bracelets, that represent four horseshoe nails welded together. Such a bauble is a novelty intended for wear with the tailored suit or sports frock.

Sheer Recklessness runs rampant in hosiery fashions, for the sheerer and more filmlike the stocking the smarter clad is the leg. For all occasions, except sports and with heavily-soled, low-heeled street oxfords, chiffon hose are worn—being equally popular in the daytime and the evening mode. Worn with the two and three-tone compose effect frocks, are hose chosen to match as closely as possible the shade of the hemline.

All Comes Out in the Wash—Is the easy-going philisophy of the new washable kid purse, of white or the same light shades as the gloves with which they are carried. Usually seen in the new flat pouch shape, with a simple strap handle on the back, they have self-covered frames.

RADIO AIDS IN STUDY OF ECLIPSE

A total eclipse of the moon observable in the Arctic on June 15 will be studied by Canadian astronomers with the aid of Station WBZ-WBZA, which through repeated messages to the Far North will put observers at all trading posts and missions on the lookout for the phenomenon. Their observations will furnish the Dominion Observatory in Canada with important data on the eclipse throughout its course above the Far North.

Radio messages will be broadcast from WBZ-WBZA tonight at 11:10 (Eastern Daylight Time) and will be repeated for three successive Saturday evenings.

VAN LEER BLACK TO FLY FROM AMSTERDAM TO N. Y.

London, May 14 (A.P.)—An Exchange telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen quotes the local representative of the Dutch Air Navigation Company as saying that Van Leer Black, a wealthy American, has ordered an airplane for a flight from Amsterdam to New York.

The machine, a Fokker, is equipped with three Lynx motors. Mr. Black has engaged G. S. Jsendorffer, a Dutch pilot, the dispatch adds. The flight will probably be by way of the Faroe Islands and Iceland.

Van Lear and Van Lear Black, Jr., are listed in the Baltimore social register.

FOREST GROVE, ON MIRROR LAKE

SUMMER HOME SITES

—OF—

QUALITY AND DISTINCTION

One of the most beautiful lakes in all New England, with three million square feet of water surface and two miles of nicely wooded, high and dry shore frontage. Just the ideal spot to erect a Summer home and enjoy many seasons' outings. The best of boating, bathing and fishing in sparkling, clean, clear water. Giant pine and oak trees. Special reservation for family parties.

Free parking space. Located in the towns of Norfolk and Wrentham, about midway between Boston and Providence, reached by the State highway (Auto Route No. 1) and North Street in Wrentham about two miles north of Wrentham Square and one mile south of the Weber Duck Inn. First time ever offered for public sale. Now open for inspection daily.

If you wish for something out-of-the-ordinary in a Summer home site, attend this sale early and secure the very choicest parcels out of the three hundred sites that are for sale. Moderate prices and easy terms will prevail at the beginning and will be graded upward as the growth of the community warrants during the season.

An artistic photo folder souvenir will be mailed to you on request, giving detailed information regarding this new development. Come to the property early in the morning, bring a lunch, and stay all day.
